WLB Orders Mine Strike Halted, Hints At Seizures

Board Takes Action As Coal Production Drops Alarmingly; 20,000 Now Idle

By the Associated Press

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 12.—Pennsylvania's vast anthracite industry, beset by a wildcat strike of 20,000 miners, faced a possibility of Government seizure tonight, as the War Labor Board demanded an immediate end of the walkout which, it said, had brought coal stocks to a level endangering prosecution of the war.

Shortly after the strike was certified to the WLB by Secretary of Labor Perkins, the board sent telegrams to John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and heads of five anthracite companies, saying, "unless this threat to the safety of our Nation is immediately terminated, the board will exercise all powers within its jurisdiction to fulfill its obligations to the country."

Production Low

The declaration was seen as an indication that the WLB, if necessary, would recommend that the President take over the mines in the name of the Government. The 14-day-old strike has closed 15 of the industry's largest mines and created the worst anthracite shortage in years in the oil-rationed East.

Anthracite production last week, State Secretary of Mines Richard Maize said, totaled 700,000 tons, compared with a market demand of 1,100,000 tons. This week's demand is estimated at 1,400,000 tons.

The War Labor Board's action came only three days before a deadline fixed by the Tri-District Mine Committee for calling an industry-wide strike unless a 50-cent-a-month increase in dues is rescinded and operators meet demands for a flat $2 a day wage increase.

The Tri-District Mine Committee is an independent group within the ranks of the United Mine Workers District 7 and is not recognized by John L. Lewis, U. M. W. chief. The U. M. W. has denounced the walkout and repeatedly urged the men to resume production.

Dues Direct Cause

Similar pleas have been made by the War Department, Solid Fuels Coordinator Ickes, who called the strike "intolerable;" the anthracite industry's governing committee of 12—composed of six operators and six U. M. W. representatives—and the Senate Committee investigating the war program.

The dues increase—voted at the U. M. W. convention at Cincinnati

Congress Plans New Higher Taxes Before March 15

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

A stiff pay-as-you-go tax collecting plan will be jammed through Congress before March 15 income tax returns are due, Democratic and Republican leaders agreed yesterday.

The agreement calls for deferment until after March 15 of consideration of much of the 16 billion dollar war tax-enforced savings program proposed by President Roosevelt in his record 109 billion dollar war budget.

A meeting of the House Ways and Means Committee is to be held next week. The Ruml pay-as-you-go plan and Treasury substitute proposals, including spendings tax, will be considered.

A proposal by Senator Bennett Clark (Democrat) Missouri, to impose a 19 per cent withholding tax on payrolls, the yield to be applied to current income tax rates, also will be considered.

This proposal, if adopted, with the 5 per cent Victory Tax, would increase the withholding at the source rate to 24 per cent.

Wallace Beats Husky Soldier At Hand Wrestling

The Vice President of the United States—Henry A. Wallace—talks of peace but is no softie.

The 54-year-old Vice President, without taking off his coat, took on an American soldier, toughened by modern training standards, in a hand-wrestling bout at the Stage Door Canteen, where he was acting as "honorary house manager." Wallace challenged any serviceman to a bout in hard-wrestling and one hardy soldier stepped up to take him on. Wallace, using all the tricks he learned as a farm boy in Adair County, Iowa, won easily.

The soldier was so chagrined that he left the canteen without giving his name. Wallace then proceeded to referee other bouts between servicemen.

Driving for These Purposes Ruled Legitimate by OPA

Here are legitimate uses of automobiles under the pleasure driving ban, as authorized by the OPA, provided alternative transportation is unavailable:

To work and to where your work takes you. A social stop may be made going to or from work, provided it is not an "unreasonable" distance off your regular route.

To visit relatives or make social calls, if you are in the Army or Navy and have furlough papers or a liberty card.

To church services, weddings, funerals.

To do essential shopping, to carry essential purchases too large for bus or streetcar transportation.

To easily accessible restaurants.

To meetings necessary to the war effort or public welfare such as those of citizens associations, Red Cross, Parent-Teacher Associations, OCD and private organizations.

To receive medical attention. To get pharmaceutical supplies in case of inclement weather.

To protect valuable property, whether public or private.

To view a house or apartment which the driver is reasonably sure of renting or purchasing.

Only President Can Stop Him, Says Petrillo

Union Official Asserts He'll Lift Record Ban If Ordered to Do So

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

James Petrillo, whose middle name is Caesar and who rules 138,000 union musicians in America, yesterday told a Senate subcommittee that President Roosevelt—but no one else—could induce him to lift the ban he clamped tight last August on the recording of new music for radio broadcasts, phonographs and jukes boxes.

Thus it appeared that the President of the United States has it within his power to accomplish what two Senate investigations and more than a half-dozen Government agencies have failed to accomplish—persuaded the round little man who used to play the trumpet "very quietly" in a Chicago public school orchestra, to permit America to be brought up to date on "canned" music.

On One Condition

But there was a condition. This is it: Petrillo should be allowed to explain to Mr. Roosevelt the plight of the professional musician. Then, if the President should request that the ban be lifted, that transcriptions of symphony and jive should be resumed for the duration, Petrillo would go along.

This, said the embattled president of the American Federation of Musicians (A. F. of L.) is the fix his union musicians are in:

"The recording companies are making all the money and the musicians are starving to death. . . .

"The transcription companies get nearly 1000 fees out of one record. Why shouldn't we get 1000 fees? We make it (the record). . . .

"The time is coming when the broadcasters will say, Petrillo, we don't need you and your musicians any more."

More Than First Meets Eye

Petrillo started an all-day session before the Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee with at least two strikes on him. Here was the man who slapped on the ban last August 1 that made "canned" music a stockpile article. He had been called a czar, with dictator powers of life and death over an entire industry. He was accused of damaging the morale of men of the armed forces by denying them the new music they wanted to hear. His middle name was Caesar.

But Petrillo was faring pretty well at the end yesterday. Whatever had been the deficiencies of his fiery and funny exposition of his case, these had been remedied by Joseph Padway, the union's general counsel.

He had convinced subcommittee members that there is more to his struggle with the "canned" music industry than first meets the eye;

2-Inch Snowball Fall Startles New England

Fitchburg, Mass., Jan. 12 (U.P.).—This city experienced a snowball snowfall today.

The balls, porous and in some cases more than 2 inches in diameter, floated to the ground so gently that a few of them remained unbroken.

When told of the phenomenon, Dr. Charles F. Brooks, director of Harvard University's Blue Hill Observatory at Milton, said that although it was rare, he had seen similar ball-like flakes fall in Worcester some 15 years ago.

Dr. Brooks said the phenomenon was possible only when the original snowflakes are large and have enough points to contact each other easily as they drift earthward, and only when the temperature is near freezing.

OPA Extends Tire Checking Time Limit

3 Deadlines Set; Inspection to Be Less Frequent

The Office of Price Administration modified yesterday its periodic tire inspection program by postponing the January 31 deadline for the first inspection, and providing for less frequent examinations.

The action was taken, OPA said, to minimize public inconvenience and to smooth out occasional work peaks for the inspectors.

A stagger system was put into effect so that there will be three different deadlines for the first inspection.

Under the revised program, all holders of basic gasoline ration A coupons will have until the end of March for their first tire inspection, and subsequent inspections will be once in each six months, instead of the former requirement of once every four months.

Motorists with B or C supplementary books or bulk coupons for fleets will be required to get their first inspections by the end of February. After that, inspections for B book holders will be once in every four months, and for C book holders and bulk coupon holders once every three months. Formerly the schedule called for examinations of cars with B and C rations once in two months.

At the same time, Joseph B. Eastman, director of defense transportation, postponed the deadline for the first tire inspection for commercial vehicles from January 15 to February 28.

Flynn Sees Politics Behind Opposition To Him as Envoy

By the Associated Press

Edward J. Flynn, retiring Democratic national chairman, said yesterday the opposition to his appointment as Minister to Australia was "purely politics." The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will decide Friday whether to hold hearings on the Flynn appointment, which Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, has termed an "insult to the people" of Australia.

War Plants, Homes to Get Oil Priority

Setup Like That Governing Steel Distribution Soon To Be Announced

Share-the-Oil Move

PETROLEUM Administrator for War given authority over "secondary suppliers" in move to combat acute fuel situation. Story on Page B-1.

Amusements Hit

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

A system of priorities on fuel oil which will give home and war plants first claim on supplies in emergency shortage situations is slated for announcement by the Petroleum Administration for war in the near future, it was learned yesterday.

At the same time, plans are being drafted to curtail the amount of oil used for nonheating purposes, using the same or a comparable priority list as a guide in making cuts.

Nonheating uses of fuel oil have received no cuts thus far, and officials expect that a substantial saving in oil consumption may be secured in this manner.

The fuel oil priority list would place theaters, bowling alleys and other places of amusement either at the bottom, or off the list entirely. Thus they would not be supplied until all other users had secured their requirements during any emergency situation.

Ickes Has the Authority

Homes and war plants would be placed at the top of the list, with commercial establishments and schools in intermediate positions.

Authority to set up a priority system was given to Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes when he was made oil "czar." As a first action in that direction, he issued a list of preferred users who were to get oil first, in the event of an emergency.

The list, which was extremely long, did not rank the preferred users, and was significant only because places of amusement were omitted.

Details of how tight the priority control will be were not available last night, but it was learned that a proposal had been submitted to place over oil the same tight control now in effect for steel, enabling production officials to know with reasonable accuracy where every ton of steel goes.

Where Is It Going?

Inability to determine where our East Coast oil supplies have been going has been a point of contention between the Office of Price Administration and Ickes' office, with Ickes charging that OPA's rationing is too loose, and OPA Administrator Henderson blaming lack of control by Ickes at the primary supplier level.

The new scheme will enable reasonably accurate determination of where the oil is going.

Industrial concerns are the principal nonheating users of fuel oil, with the result that one effect of curtailment may be speedier conversion to alternate fuels.

At the same time, consideration is being given to reducing supplies available to nonessential industrial establishments, perhaps forcing them to curtail operations.

Such a move would be in harmony with the national manpower policy which provides for eventual

New Assault on Rommel Near; Soviets Push On in Caucasus, Meet Stiff Resistance on Don

Russians Within Gun Range of Salsk, Rail City; Capture 10 More Settlements

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), Jan. 13. Russian troops were reported early today within artillery range of Salsk, an important railway junction 110 miles to the southeast of Rostov, while Moscow announced the capture of ten more Caucasian settlements, and the killing of 2000 Germans along the lower Don where the Nazis are counterattacking night and day.

Six villages, including Essentuki, or Yessentuki, Karras and Beshtaunit—all in the Pyatigorsk area—fell to the advancing Russians, the regular midnight communique said, in reporting the fighting along the Baku-Rostov railway skirting the northern slopes of the Caucasian Mountains.

Another town which the Russians reported occupying was Levokumsy, about 75 miles northeast of Georgievsk, and the British news agency Reuters said the Russian troops from the north Caucasus had joined forces near there with the Kalmyck Steppes Army which had been driving southwestward.

4 Settlements Taken

To the north the Russians took four more settlements in the area of Zimovniki on the Stalingrad-Tikhoretsk railway. The Red Army's advance units are already beyond Kuberle, 150 miles southwest of Stalingrad on this railway, and less than 50 miles from Salsk.

Stockholm reports said the Russians already were battling the Germans dug in northeast of Salsk, where a railway connects with Rostov to the northwest.

Along the lower Don River where the Russians last were reported about 60 miles east of Rostov, the Soviet communique also announced the capture of several localities, but did not identify them. For three days now the Russians have not claimed any specific gains in this area.

"The Germans are throwing in reserves in an effort to stem the Soviet advance at all costs," the communiue said of this area where the Nazis were counterattacking day and night.

Foe Repulsed on Central Front

"Soviet troops wore out the enemy by their defense and followed up with a strong blow. Some 2000 of the enemy were wiped out. Forty tanks and 12 enemy guns were destroyed. Booty and prisoners were captured."

On the central front the Russians said their troops also repulsed Nazi

Laffey Blasted Battleship and 2 Other Enemy Craft

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Jan. 12.—At the height of a violent sea battle in the Solomons, the huge gray hulk of a Jap battleship came slashing through the darkness, her engines driving her at a speed of close to 25 knots.

In her path was the audacious U. S. S. Laffey, the first of a swift new series of destroyers.

The captain of the Laffey, Lieut. Comdr. W. E. Hank of Norfolk, Va., and her crew, were set for a kill that night. A few minutes earlier they had silenced the guns of a Jap cruiser. But this was bigger game.

Let Go Torpedoes

The report of the Twelfth Naval District told today of the battle that raged November 12 and 13.

The Laffey rocketed straight at the vast shape of the Jap battlewagon, her engines racing at "emergency full." To the crew of the destroyer it must have appeared that Commander Hank was hurling his vessel at the enemy battleship in a head-on suicide thrust. But he had other plans—plans that had to be true to the last decimal.

When the range was right Commander Hank let go with a salvo of torpedoes. But the Laffey was moving almost as fast as the torpedoes. And it was clear that with both ships heading at full-speed for the same square yard of ocean, the destroyer was going to

Carrier Accounted For 18 Enemy Ships In Pacific Prowling

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

American carrier-based planes and warship antiaircraft guns shot down 156 Japanese airplanes during the Battle of Santa Cruz Islands October 26—the largest toll ever run up during a single day's fighting at sea, it was disclosed yesterday.

The Navy announced this record "bag" of enemy aircraft—declared by spokesmen to be only rivaled by peak days during the Battle of Britain—in publishing the story of the sunken American aircraft carrier Hornet's fighting career at sea.

The Hornet was mortally wounded in the October 26 battle after her planes and guns helped account for the 156 Japs aircraft destroyed by the American task force that day. Even more devastating, however, were the blows struck by her bomber and torpedo squadrons on enemy ships during five notable months of war in the Pacific.

Eighteen Nipponese vessels, including aircraft carriers and battleships, were sunk or crippled by the Hornet's planes.

In her last battle, dive-bombers of Scouting Squadron Eight, commanded by Lieut. Comdr. William J. Widhelm, the Navy said, fought their way through a screen of Jap Zero fighters to smash and prob-

Two months before the Santa Cruz battle, the Hornet had a narrow brush with disaster. An enemy submarine launched a torpedo at the carrier September 6, which seemed sure to hit. ## 75 Seabees Taken To Battle as They Repair Carrier

The Navy disclosed yesterday that an American aircraft carrier, damaged in one engagement in the South Pacific, was being repaired while racing to go into action again with the job being finished while the latter battle was under way.

The unnamed carrier put into a South Pacific port for emergency repairs after the first battle and a crew of 75 seabees was put aboard to do the job, the Navy said. Then came orders to put to sea and engage the enemy.

Along went the seabeesmen of the Navy's construction battalion—who both work and fight. They kept at the job even in the midst of the battle and finished the repairs. Their feat won high praise from both the carrier's commander and Admiral William F. Halsey, jr., South Pacific commander.

Tanks Strengthen British 8th Army; Allies Punish Foe In Italy and Africa

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 12.—The British Eighth Army was reported about ready for a fresh spurt toward Tripoli tonight and its Anglo-American and French Allies in Tunisia, Fighting French in the Fezzan wastes of lower Libya and their air forces dealt hard blows at the Axis in the Mediterranean theater.

The Morocco radio said strong reinforcements, including tank forces, had arrived to strengthen forward elements of the Eighth Army before Wadi Zemzem, 160 airline miles southeast of Tripoli.

This possible indication that Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's forces were getting ready to resume their advance supplemented Berlin reports that thousands of Allied vehicles had been concentrated to the south of Marshal Erwin Rommel's positions.

Forts Blast Italian Post

Among developments of the day were these:

American Flying Fortresses for the first time thundered into Tripolitania out of the west, and bombarded the Italian fort of Gadames, 170 miles southwest of Tripoli. Putting the Axis under a two-way hammering from American four-motored bombers for the first time in a 24-hour cycle, Liberators from the Cairo force slid over Naples on the Italian mainland by daylight yesterday for their first bombing in 1943 of that embarkation point.

In Tunisia, British and French patrols were more active than in days and fought several successful actions.

British infantry and tanks pushed the Germans off a ridge and settled themselves astride the arterial Goubellat Road 6 miles north of Bou Arada and about 14 miles south of Medjez-El-Bab.

French troops of Gen. Henri Giraud drove the enemy out of a mountain pass at a point 23 miles south of Pont-du-Fahs and captured at least 180 prisoners.

All of this came in the midst of information from reliable neutral sources from Germany that the Germans were engaged in a squabble over authority in Africa, with Marshal Rommel refusing to accept orders from Gen. Walter Nehring in Tunisia, and General Nehring refusing to knuckle under to Rommel. Failing to reconcile the two generals, it was reported, Adolf Hitler has appointed a third, Col. Gen. Juergen von Arnim, as commander in chief in Tunisia.

Conspiracy Seen In Darlan Slaying; More Arrests Made

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Christmas Eve assassination of Admiral Jean Darlan appears to have been the "result of a conspiracy reaching in many directions" and additional "personages" have been arrested, a spokesman for Gen. Henri Giraud announced tonight.

The spokesman said he could not forecast the trend of the inquiry when asked if a French monarchist group headed by the Count of Paris had figured in the murder.

At the same time he announced officially that General Giraud will meet Gen. Charles de Gaulle, the Fighting French leader, in the near future, to reach a working agreement for the two French forces.

Algiers has seethed for two days with rumors of the seizure of many prominent persons in the Darlan murder. Those who now have been arrested will be tried by a military tribunal composed of five judges, the spokesman said.

5 Brothers Lost Together as Their Ship Goes Down in Solomons

Mother Very Proud Of 'Her' Boys Who Served on Juneau

Waterloo, Iowa, Jan. 12 (AP).—The five Sullivan boys got what they wanted—a crack at the Japs. And they got that chance together—just as they wanted it.

The Navy notified their parents today that the five brothers are "missing in action" following the sinking last November of the cruiser Juneau, aboard which they had served together ever since the ship was commissioned a little less than a year ago.

But the Juneau took part in the blazing Battle of Guadacanal in which the Japanese were defeated with extremely heavy losses and the brothers probably avenged Bill's death—and that's what they wanted.

"You see," explained George Sullivan when the five enlisted a little over a year ago, "a buddy of ours was killed in the Pearl Harbor attack—Bill Ball of Fredericksburg, Iowa."

"That's where we want to go now, to Pearl Harbor," put in Francis, and the others nodded.

So the brothers, George T., 29, gunner's mate, second class; Francis H., 20, coxswain; Joseph E., 23, seaman, second class; Madison A., 22, seaman, second class; and Albert L., 20, seaman, second class, joined the Navy with the provision that they not be separated.

Sons of Thomas F. Sullivan, a railroad freight conductor, the boys all worked for a Waterloo meat packing firm. George and Francis had completed 4-year Navy hitches just 6 months before reenlisting. All were single except Albert, whose wife and 22-month-old son joined the brothers' mother and only sister, Genevieve, 25, in their grief-stricken home.

"All we can do is hope, now," said the 49-year-old mother. "Maybe they'll all show up somewhere, some day soon.

"But if they are gone, it will be some comfort to know they went together — as they wanted—and gave their lives for their country

Laval Pledges 400,000 More Men to Reich

By Relin Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 12.—Adolph Hitler has made a political deal with French Chief of Government Pierre Laval which permanently deprives France of 4,800 square miles of territory comprising two departments along the Belgian border, involves sending 400,000 more skilled French workers to Germany and promises to strengthen Laval's position among the collaborationist French leaders, a fighting French spokesman said today.

At the same time the long-awaited agreement, which turned down Hitler's reported plan to conscript Frenchmen to fight the United Nations anl put Laval in control of the French police in the former occupied zone, with fuller administrative powers generally contained fewer cancessions to the Germans than some observers had expected.

The departments which will not be restored to the French state are those of Nord and Pas-de-Calais, extending from the North Sea southward for about 100 miles along the Belgian border. They are part of the recently created "forbidden zone" in which the Germans are building fortifications and most Frenchmen have already been removed from them.

Hitler strengthened Laval's hand against his collaborationist rival, Jacques Doriot, leader of the French Fascist Popular Party, to the degree that he assured the former that his government was the last with which Berlin will negotiate.

As part of the agreement Laval promised to turn over to Germany five French destroyers and two large tugs, presumably the remnants of the French fleet scuttled at Toulon.

A settlement was postponed on the question of making Paris the seat of Laval's government, thus leaving open a matter which has vexed Vichy-German relations.

Hitler, under the agreement, will become arbiter of further negotiations between France and Italy, presumably concerning the island of Corsica and other French territory under Italian occupation.

The agreement gives Germany full control of French industry, finance and agriculture, thus formalizing what is already virtually the fact in these fields.

Army Policeman Shot, Soldier Slain

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Corpl. Roy T. Holland, 23, of Memphis, Tenn., was shot and killed today in a diner near Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn, where he was stationed.

Police said the shooting started when a military policeman, Sergt. Walter Ordon of Brooklyn, also attached to Fort Hamilton, went to a booth where Holland was sitting with another soldier and was reported to be acting boisterously. When the M. P. made a suggestion to Holland that he go home, police said, Holland whipped out a 45 and shot the M. P. in the thigh, then bolted for the back door.

Ordon, police said, then fired two shots at the fleeing corporal, who was felled with bullet in his right chest.

Victory Near, China Is Told

By the Associated Press

Chungking, Jan. 12.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek told his armies and the people of China in a broadcast today that "we can see already the firs. signs of coming victory in this world war against aggression."

In the broadcast commemorating the new treaties with the United States and Britain relinquishing extra-territorial rights in China, he declared: "The time of the enemy's defeat is near at hand."

China's legitimate diplomatic aspirations, generally speaking, have been satisfied by the treaties, and China can now go to the peace conference on an equal footing with her allies, Foreign inister T. V. Soong asserted.

Soong predicted that other countries with extra-territorial rights in China would follow the example of the United States and Great Britain in relinquishing them.

Soong paid tribute to the parts played by United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull and British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden toward conclusion of the new treaties.

"Both proved warm in their sympathies and deep i.. their understanding of China's aspirations," Soong said.

Farmer Defies Sheriff's Men In Suicide Threat

Hillsdale, Ill., Jan. 12 (INS).—Keeping a bared great toe on the trigger of a shotgun, Arthur Ferkel last night defied sheriffs' officers who sought to dissuade him from an announced intention of committing suicide.

Ferkel, 48-year-old farmer, stood in a corner of the living room of his home with the muzzle of the gun under his chin, threatening to fire the weapon if the officers approached too close.

Varying a stance that he had maintained almost continuously since 8 o'clock this morning, he occasionally moved to sit in a nearby chair. He turned a deaf ear to all entreaties to put down his gun and surrender.

Police said Ferkel had been despondent since the death of a 12-year-old daughter last March.

Nazi General Lays Success of Red Drives To Careful Planning, Superior Numbers

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 12.—Lieut. Gen. Kurt Dietmar, German military commentator, blamed Russian numerical superiority, the weather, and skillful timing of counter-blows by Russia's generals for the German army's situation on the Eastern Front, in a broadcast to the German people from the Frankfurt Radio Station last night.

Excerpts from the broadcast were made public by the Office of War Information today.

In a "review of the Eastern Front at the turn of the year," Dietmar said the Russians had achieved an "indisputably great advantage" because of their greater numbers, while Germany made "restrained and sparing use" of classes of military age, "absolutely in accordance with conducting a war of long duration."

Of the current Russian offensives o. the Don River and in the Caucasus to the south, he said skillful German leadership and elasticity in fighting methods "have so far absolutely denied the Soviets any tangible success."

Concerning Russia's timing of counterstrokes, and the help they got from the weather, Dietmar said:

The period of late autumn and intense frost which sets in very suddenly, to a great extent eliminated the strongest arm of the German command—mobility."

"Beginning the second and third of November the attacks were directed against the flanks of the German attacking wedge which was thrust forward against the Volga at Stalingrad. Here the enemy has made breaches of no inconsiderable depth but so far he has not been able to shake the German position in and around Stalingrad."

Citizens Urge Raises for Police, Firemen, Teachers

Two citizens' associations last night went on record indorsing salary increases for District policemen, firemen and school teachers.

They were the Southeast Council and the Logan-Thomas Circle Associations. The latter group also adopted a resolution advocating the so-called block system, for keeping city streets clean whereby citizens of the areas will do the work instead of paid city workers due to the shortage of labor.

The Southeast Council urged that some provision be made to relieve the congestion at streetcar loading platforms at Berney Circle Southeast.

Roosevelt Asks More Farm Output

Food Needed "To Win the Final Victory" President Declares in a Broadcast

President Roosevelt yesterday keynoted M-day for the Nation's farms by calling on the country's six million farm families for a greater food production effort, advising them that "a lot more" food will be required "to win the final victory and the peace that will follow."

"Food is a weapon in total war—fully as important in its way as guns or planes or tanks," President Roosevelt said in a Nation-wide Farm Mobilization Day radio broadcast read over the networks for him by Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes.

Others, including Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, Lord Woolton, British Food Minister, and Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Ambassador to the United States, placed emphasis on the vital war role which ever increasing American farm production is playing.

County Farm Meetings

Meanwhile, farmers through the country attended county meetings to discuss the food goals for 1943 and ways in which they could use all available resources to make the 350 million acres in food production the most productive in American history.

The mobilization meetings were held in the realization that Wickard had called upon American farmers to exceed 1942 food production by substantial amounts, and that even Wickard's enormous new goals would probably be raised before long to provide enough food to go round.

Pointing out that the Axis has used food "cold-bloodedly" to advance its cause, President Roosevelt said that "we of the United Nations also are using food as a weapon to keep our fighting men fit and to maintain the health of all our civilian families.

Food Wins Friends

"We are using food to earn the friendship of people in liberated areas and to serve as a promise and an encouragement to people who are not yet free," the President said.

"In terms of total food supply, the United Nations are far stronger than our enemies. But our great food resources are scattered to the ends of the earth and we no longer have food to waste. Food is precious, just as oil and steel are precious.

"As part of our global strategy, we must produce all we can of every essential farm product; we must divide our supplies wisely and use them carefully. We cannot afford to waste any of them."

Wickard called upon the Nation's farmers to "work together in one great Nation-wide effort," to decide "the battle of food . . . out on your farms."

"It calls for concentrating all our resources on essential war production, and for seeing that scarce labor and materials are used where they will do the most good," Wickard said.

He promised that the Government would provide all possible help, but acknowledged that it often "fell short."

Britain's Needs

Lord Woolton told the farmers that Britain is depending on them "not to fail, so that we can go on fighting and producing planes and tanks and ships as we have for the past three years."

Woolton gave the farmers a pledge that Britain would not waste any food it received, but would "get the absolute maximum out of every pound."

Litvinoff pointed out that food for the Soviet armies was helping to "reinforce the common front," and that American contributions "have played no small part in making it possible for the Soviet troops, with that courage, determination and spirit of self-sacrifice, which characterize them, to deal mighty blows at the Fascist troops when they were attacking, and now to go over to the attack themselves, to destroy Nazis by the hundred-thousands, and drive them back."

Admiral William Brent Young, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, said that "it may seem far from a farm to a beachhead in the Solomons, but actually, a direct life line reaches from every farm in America to every American battle zone in the world."

Guadalcanal Report

Col. William Capers James who was recently on Guadalcanal as Maj. Gen. Alexander Vandegrift's chief of staff, said "food was not abundant, but there was enough at all times, thank to you folks on the farm to give those men the energy to endure and to win."

Messages of greeting and support to the Nation's farmers were sent by both A. F. L. President William Green and C. I. O. President Philip Murray.

James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, called upon Wickard for a 20 per cent increase in food production by completing the job of converting American farms to war food production.

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau Federation, said that "production will be limited only by the amount of labor equipment, and material that are made available to farmers in 1943."

Admiral Scott Died When Atlanta Sunk

Pearl Harbor, T. H., Jan. 12 (AP). Rear Admiral Norman Scott, formerly of Kirkwood, Mo., lost his life when the cruiser Atlanta was sunk during the Battle of Guadalcanal last November, it was disclosed today.

His death had been previously reported, but not the circumstances nor time. Announcement by the Navy Department in Washington yesterday of the loss of the Atlanta permitted the disclosure that the admiral had gone down with the Atlanta in the naval engagement of November 13 to 15, 1942, in the Solomon Islands area.

CARLO TRESCA,
58-year-old anti-Fascist editor and former I. W. W. leader, was shot to death in dimmed-out Fifth Avenue, New York

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 12.—Authorities today studied back copies and files of Il Martello (The Hammer) for clues that might lead to the slayer of its editor, anti-Fascist Carlo Tresca.

Tresca was felled by two bullets last night as he walked near his office on lower Fifth Avenue.

Giuseppe Callabi, who was with the bearded, 58-year-old revolutionist at the time, was quoted as saying that at the corner of Fifteenth Street a man opened fire behind them and escaped in a sedan, which police believe they may have found. A loaded revolver was found nearby, indicating police said, that assassins had lain in wait at both ends of the street.

Callabi said he and Tresca met at the latter's office to wait for four other members of the Mazzini Society, anti-Fascist group, for a conference, but the four did not show up and they went out to eat. The shooting occurred while they were going to a restaurant, he said.

Roosevelt Asks 4 Billions For More Ships

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to provide a supplemental appropriation of four billion dollars for the Maritime Commission's expanded merchant shipbuilding program.

The request, submitted to the House through the Budget Bureau, included also a contract authorization of $5,250,000,000, with the explanation that $3,076,280,000 of that sum was represented in the four billion dollar cash request.

Also submitted to Congress yesterday were these requests for appropriations for the fiscal year 1943.

State Department, $7,433,405 for emergencies that have come up in the diplomatic and consular service because of the war. Secretary Hull listed three million dollars as needed for maintenance of foreign officials in this country pending their evacuation. Another $2,100,000 was requested for the contingent fund, the purposes not described. In addition, $300,000 was sought for repairing flood damage on the Rio Grande-Mexican border rectification and canalization projects.

Federal Works Agency, 40 million dollars to expand the construction of access roads—the highways linking military establishments. Congress provided 74 million dollars for this purpose in December, 1941.

Federal Communications Commission, $140,500 for purchase of land in Hawaii and construction of buildings for monitoring facilities.

Russian Woman Air Heroine Is Buried With Honors in Kremlin

By International News Service

Moscow, Jan. 12 (AP).—Major Marina Raskova, 33-year-old heroine of the Soviet Union, who commanded a regiment of dive bombers in the Red airforce, was buried with military honors in a wall of the Kremlin today.

Major Raskova, who won one of the Nation's highest honors in 1938 for a flight from Moscow to the Far East, died in the cockpit of her warplane near an aviation manufacturing center behind the lines after returning from action at the front.

Her body was brought here and cremated, and the ashes lay in state yesterday in a house closed to the public. The ashes of Paulina Osipenko, who accompanied Major Raskova on the Far Eastern flight, already rested in the same place of honor in the Kremlin wall.

More Canadians

A British Port (Wednesday), Jan. 13 (AP).—Thousands of reinforcements for the Canadian overseas army have landed at this British port, it was disclosed today.

Although army personnel formed the greater part of the movement, it also included a large group of Canadian navy personnel returning overseas after leave in Canada.

French Communists

London, Jan. 12 (AP).—The French National Committee announced today that the French Communist Party, which has been outlawed in its Nazi-dominated homeland, has formally aligned itself with the Fighting French organization.

The Communist resolution was brought to London by Fernand Grenier, Communist deputy for Paris, who escaped from a concentration camp where he had been held since the fall of France.

Sweden Builds Defense

Stockholm, Jan. 12 (AP).—Steadily building her military strength, Sweden plans to spend 2,060,000,000 kroner (currently $492,340,000) on defense during the fiscal year 1943-44, it was announced today.

The new regular budget calls for the expenditure of 800 million kroner ($191,200,000) on the military establishment—45 millions more than last year, due mainly to rising costs.

But in addition Sweden is meeting the cost of defense, preparedness and special food supply measures as a result of the war by a separate emergency budget estimated at 1,260,000,000 kroner ($301,140,000).

D.C. Family Had 3 of Kin Aboard Hornet

By Roland Nicholson
Post Staff Writer

The Armstrongs don't have to keep their secret any longer.

Now that the Navy officially has announced that the carrier Hornet was sunk October 26 during the battle of the Santa Cruz Islands, the Armstrongs—Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Armstrong, 6007 Wynnwood Road, Wood Acres, Md.—can let it be known that their family was strongly represented, numerically and heroically, aboard the ill-fated vessel.

On the Hornet during her last days were two nephews, Herbert and Ernest Carrington, whom the Armstrongs reared from infancy, and Gorden Reeves, who married the Armstrongs' daughter, Annie Laurie.

Downed Jap Planes

Seventeen-year-old Ernest gave the Japs something to remember him by, according to Armstrong, by manning an abandoned gun and shooting a couple Nipponese planes before clamboring over the side to join his shipmates. His exploit was acknowledged officially with a citation, Armstrong said yesterday.

But Ernest had more than sand in his blood to motivate his sniping at the Japs. There was his brother, Allison Carrington, who has been a prisoner of the Japs since the fall of Corregidor.

Six Stars In Place

When Annie Laurie married Reeves last December, Armstrong added another star to the five already adorning the service flag hanging at the Federal Diner which he operates in Hyattsville.

Now he's added two more for his sons, William B. Armstrong, jr., 21, and Luther Alonzo Armstrong, 20, who are both in the Coast Guard.

All of which gives the Armstrong family eight personal representatives on the fighting fronts of the world.

The Washington area had another resident abroad the Hornet when she went down in the person of Lieut. Gerald McAteer, Medical Corps. A graduate of the Georgetown University School of Medicine and a resident physician at Georgetown Hospital before entering the service. Lieutenant McAteer returned here following the sinking and on January 3 was married to Miss Beth Barton.

and victory."

Navy Secretary Knox some time ago invited the mother to christen a Navy tug soon to be sent down the ways and she was asked if she planned still to take part. She smiled through her tears.

"Of course I'll take part. The boys would want it that way, I know.

"The boys always wrote at the end of their letters, 'keep your chin up.'" Mrs. Sullivan recalled. "And now's a good time to do just that."

Navy officers said at Washington the loss of the five brothers was the heaviest blow suffered by any single family since Pearl Harbor and "probably in American naval history" since Navy policy is to divide members of family in wartime service. They pointed out the brothers had insisted on staying together despite repeated recommendations of their ship's executive officer.

Zeros Using Base at Munda Despite Raids

By Griffing Bancroft
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Despite daily poundings by American bombers the Japs still are operating sizeable forces of Zero fighters from the Munda airfield, 180 miles northwest of Guadalcanal, the Navy disclosed yesterday.

A communique reported that American fliers were attacked by 12 Zeros in that area, shot down four of them and possibly two others with the loss of only one American plane, a Grumman Wildcat fighter.

The air battle occurred on January 11 (Solomon Island time) over the water between New Georgia Island, where the Munda airfield is located, and Santa Isabel Island to the east.

This would be about 150 miles north of the American-held airfield on Guadalcanal.

The communique said that on the same day American bombers attacked Munda for the thirty-third time since the Japs moved in there on December 9. However, clouds prevented accurate bombing and observation of results was difficult, the Navy said.

Spokesmen said that they believed the Japs are now using Munda as a "staging field" and not as a regular air base because of the constant poundings by American fliers.

This means that the enemy has gasoline cached at Munda and uses it as a refueling base for planes flown in from safer bases in the northern Solomons. It is believed here that the Japs are not able to base planes continually at the heavily attacked Munda.

The communique, No. 249, follows:

"SOUTH PACIFIC (all dates are east longitude).

"1. On January 11:

"(a) A force of Dauntless dive-bombers (Douglas SBD) escorted by Wildcat fighters (Grumman F4F) was attacked by 12 Japanese Zeros between Santa Isabel Island and New Georgia Island. Four Zeros were shot down and two others were possibly destroyed. One Wildcat failed to return.

"(b) A force of Marauder medium bombers (Martin B-26) with Aircobra (Bell P-39) escort attacked Japanese positions at Munda. Clouds over the target areas prevented accurate bombing and made observation of results difficult."

ably sink an enemy carrier of the Zuikaku class.

Wildhelm's "Bombing Fools" shot down 16 of the Zeros—to only one of their own—and then came into murderous antiaircraft fire to plant seven 1000-pound bomb hits on the carrier. The vessel—described by the airmen as the biggest carrier in the world, larger than our Saratoga—"broke into roaring flames for her entire length and went virtually dead in the water," the Navy said.

The saga of the Hornet included notable action in the Midway and Santa Cruz battles and attacks on Jap bases in the Buin-Faisi and Rekata Bay areas of the Solomons. Four ships were hit, airfields were bombed, and fuel dumps, landing barges, supplies and buildings were set afire in the latter assaults.

Finally, she went to her death by the torpedo and gunfire of two American destroyers hours after Japanese attacks rendered her helpless. The Navy disclosed yesterday that most of the crew of the gallant vessel were rescued before she sunk. Only 129 out of her complement of 2900 men were lost.

Many acts of heroism took place during the Hornet's last hours. One raging fire was extinguished by bucket brigades after the fire-fighting apparatus was destroyed.

At the height of an attack, a 1000-pound bomb pierced the carrier's deck and entered the compartment next to the ordnance room, but did not explode. The ordnance chief entered the compartment and made the bomb harmless—in the dark!

Ordered to Midway

The five months' battle log of the Hornet began in late May, 1942. The vessel had been on an extended cruise into enemy waters without contacting the Japs, when ordered to join an American fleet gathering off Midway to meet a huge Nipponese armada.

Her squadrons went into action there and played a major part in defeating the Japs in this great battle. In five separate attacks, the Hornet's planes scored more than 14 direct hits and two near misses on enemy warships.

that it is, essentially, the old struggle of the workingman against the labor-saving machine. Senator Tobey (Republican) of New Hampshire promised that broadcasting and the record-making companies would be cross-examined as severely as was Petrillo. Said Tobey:

"Before we get through we are going to have a whole exposition of this record-making business."

Reading from a prepared statement, Petrillo called on the subcommittee to make a "full investigation of the music industry" before it tried to decide who was right—Petrillo or the radio and record companies.

"Only by such an investigation can the tremendous control of the entire industry, including record-making, radio broadcasting and the like be shown to be in the hands of a few giant corporations who have become powerful and prosperous on the original work, and at the expense of, the live musician.

"Look into the charges, frequently made, and which we believe to be true, of monopoly, interlocking arrangements and large profits."

"We are the only labor organization that makes the machine that destroys it," he said.

How Laffey Fought Four Jap Ships

be there first. But by how much? Every man held his breath.

The Navy report said "as the bows crossed, an alert Jap on the forward deck could have tossed a hand grenade onto the deck of the destroyer." the margin was just over 10 feet. But the racing Laffey got clear in time. It appeared that two of the torpedoes hit the battleship.

And then, as a parting insult, the Laffey's four 5-inch guns were turned on the battleship's massive superstructure, focused on the bridge.

The bridge appeared literally to pulverize and blow away. "It was shot completely off the ship," the Navy stated.

The battleship started blazing away with secondary guns—she couldn't depress her larger batteries far enough—as the Laffey widened the range. Then the little destroyer found herself in deeper trouble. She had separated from her companion ships and was surrounded by the enemy. There was a battleship on her stern, a second on her port beam, and two large Jap destroyers on the port bow.

The Laffey and the two Jap destroyers opened fire simultaneously. The Laffey put one Jap out of action and left her burning briskly. But the other put a torpedo into our ship, and got a fair hit on the Laffey's deck.

The Laffey still had three of her 5-inch guns working, and turned them on the remaining Jap destroyer, in a no-quarter duel at point blank range. Damage to both ships was tremendous. One after another the Laffey's guns were silenced. Finally she was down to a single gun. But she kept on fighting. The Jap destroyer tried to creep away. But she exploded and sank.

The Laffey was left alone on the darkened sea. But she was a sorry sight of a ship, with all her guns silenced and a bad fire out of control. Then the Jap battleship whose bridge had been shot away straddled the Laffey with a salvo of 14-inchers. The destroyer was almost swamped by the splash.

The fire was burning without hope of recovery. The wounded men were put on life rafts; the others in life jackets. Commander Hank gave orders to abandon ship.

Commander Hank and three other officers were on deck forward. A medical officer was bringing up the last wounded man from sick bay. A violent explosion ripped the Laffey apart. The medical officer was trapped below; the captain was never seen again. The Laffey sank immediattely.

counterattacks northwest of Velikie Luki, which is 80 miles from the Latvian border. Two enemy tanks were blown up by Soviet mines, and the remaining five used in this daylong fight were destroyed by Red antitank guns, the communique said. Two hundred German dead were reported left on the battlefield.

In another sector of the central front Soviet troops wiped out one Nazi infantry company and destroyed 14 machineguns, 1 self-propelling gun, an ammunition dump and other material, the communique said.

Cossack Horseman Lead Soviet Drive

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Jan. 12.—The Russian forces of the Caucasus were reported driving the Germans before them tonight in an offensive rolling trapidly toward the strong Nazi positions of Krasnodar and Krotpkin, but the Soviet armies of the middle Don were bitterly engaged by masses of German tanks and infantry.

In the Caucasus, Kuban cossack horsemen, riding out of the mountains, led an unbroken advance past half a dozen important cities and towns newly won along the railway approaches to Rostov, thrusting forward rapidly across the steppes northwest of recaptured Mineralnye Vody, where the Kuban River flows north.

Field dispatches declared the Caucasian provinces of North Ossetia and Kabardino Bakaria now had been wholly cleared of the invader; the midday Soviet communique announced that Russian cavalry forces had driven on an additional 15 miles toward Rostov.

Of the fighting along the lower Don, where powerful Russian forces are seeking to smash down upon Rostov, the Soviet command's midday report made no specific mention of progress.

"The enemy," it said, "is striving to stem the advance of Soviet troops, hurling large forces of tanks and infantry into the battle."

In less official quarters it was said the Nazis, frantically trying to stem these most important of current Russian offensives, were throwing as many as a hundred tanks at a time into counterattacks.

On the Moscow front as well, in the area southwest of Velikie Luki near the Latvian frontier region, violent German resistance was officially reported.

Jap Defense Line At Akyab Bolstered

Not Propaganda

Ackerman Calls News Key to Peace

By the Associated Press

Haverford, Pa., Jan. 12.—Expressing concern as to whether the global peace after the war is to be based upon propaganda or news, Dean Carl W. Ackerman said today that if the former method is chosen "there will be no national or international freedom of news, psychological warfare will continue and lead inevitably to another war."

"Today all beligerent governments are using propaganda to fight their enemies in so-called psychological warfare," the dean of the Graduate School of Journalism of Columbia University said at Haverford College.

"Wherever public information is used for that or for any other selfish or tendentious purpose, whether it is written, timed and distributed to influence rather than to inform public opinion, it becomes propaganda. In time peoples generally recognize it as such, as if they knew that information is like water—it may be either pure or contaminated," he said.

Ackerman said that if the pledge of freedom of speech in the Atlantic Charter is to be enforced at the peace conference there must be "freedom of inquiry and reporting by journalism of all nations. If freedom of speech is to be a practical factor in international affairs, freedom of international communications must be provided for and pledged in the peace treaties."

Reinforcements Land in Indo-China For Burma War

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 12.—The Japanese suddenly have displayed strong resistance in the defense of Akyab against British troops who have advanced to within about 15 miles of that Bay of Bengal port in Burma, and have landed several thousand troops in Indo-China to bolster the Burma front, it was reported today.

A British communique from New Delhi said the Japanese were "resisting strongly" against continued pressure of Field Marshal Sir Archibald P. Wavell's forces, and a Reuters correspondent with the troops said British patrols had penetrated as far as Foul Point at the tip of the Mayu Peninsula.

This peninsula on the west side of the Mayu River appeared clear of the Japanese when the enemy appeared from hiding places in the jungles and hills and attacked in the region of Donbaik, where fighting is still going on, the correspondent said. The tip of the peninsula is 15 miles or less from Akyab.

Meanwhile, Indian patrols were reported working southward near Rathedaung on the east side of the Mayu River.

A Chinese army spokesman was quoted in dispatches from Chungking as saying that several thousand Japanese reinforcements for Burma had been landed in Indo-China. Presumably the Japanese intended to move these men overland rather than attempt the difficult and dangerous transport journey by way of Singapore and the Bay of Bengal to Rangoon.

The spokesman said that the Japanese force at Akyab was estimated at fewer than 2000 men about a month ago.

Meanwhile, Allied air forces in India and China were being increased week by week and the British communique announced a new series of raids against the Japanese in Burma.

Pintha railway station in central Burma was attacked and engines and rolling stock destroyed, two small Japanese steamers on the Chindwin River and near Akyab were damaged, buildings and railway trucks at Kyaikthin, and a number of villages near Akyab, including Rathedaung and Laungchaung were bombed.

U. S. Air Strength Growing

Brig. Gen. Clayton L. Bissell, commander of United States Army Air Forces in India, Burma and China, said at New Delhi that United States air strength was increasing every week while the Japanese power was on the down grade.

American fighters and bombers went on 50 per cent more missions in December than in November, destroyed 16 Japanese fighters, probably destroyed 11 and damaged three, he reported. Five fighters, including three in China, were lost.

Twenty-five of December's missions were from India and 20 from China, he said.

Edward Higgins of Glendive, Mont., recently broke his record for plane deliveries by arriving at an Indian base from Miami in 66 hours and 5 minutes, Bissell announced.

Merchant Marine To Enlist Officers

Vacancies for officer candidates in the Merchant Marine still exist in the February 1 quota for the Washington area, Ensign Charles C. Gastrock, jr., enrolling officer at the Maritime Service Station, 1311 H Street Northwest, announced yesterday.

Openings for engine room officers are unlimited, he said, and there are still a few vacancies for deck officers. Qualifications for the former include either 14 months' experience at sea, three months' experience in installation of marine engines, a college degree in marine, mechanical or electrical engineering or at least three years' college work in these three branches of the field.

Lawyer for 3 Held by U. S. Sees Hoffman

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The lawyer for three of the alleged conspirators whose indictment Representative Clare E. Hoffman wants investigated—he claims it is an effort to discredit him—acknowledged last night that he had been in touch with Hoffman off and on for some weeks.

Another conspiracy defendant, Edward James Smythe, has written Hoffman from the District Jail. Smythe, who wrote for the seditious paper, Publicity, was a fugitive more than three months before he was nabbed in New York.

Hoffman's first charge that the investigation was aimed at him came last April, the day after his secretary, Helen Boyer, was called before the special grand jury on Axis agents. Hoffman himself was also a witness and it was disclosed that vast quantities of his "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech were distributed by some of the suspects.

28 Indicted

Twenty-eight of them were indicted and last December 8 Hoffman made his "It's All a Smear" speech in the House, demanding an investigation of the Department of Justice. Nevertheless, the original 28 and 6 new defendants were accused in a new indictment, presented last week, of plotting with a Nazi propagandist to destroy the loyalty of the Army and Navy.

In the gallery, listening to Hoffman, was John T. Bonner, lawyer for Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, James True and George E. Deatherage, a Hitler admirer who was indicted last week and pleaded not guilty yesterday.

Hoffman was back on the floor day before yesterday, calling for the investigation and admitting, for the first time, the truth of The Post's report of last April that he sent quantities of his "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech to the alleged conspirators, David Baxter, Gerald B. Winrod and Charles B. Hudson.

Denies Aided Hoffman

Bonner denied yesterday that he helped Hoffman prepare the speech he made Monday, but he said he had been in Hoffman's office three times and had talked to him on the telephone on two or three occasions. Asked whether he gave Hoffman any of the information the Congressman claimed to have about the case, Bonner said "that's not a fair question."

Bonner said he could not tell whether anything Hoffman said was based on their conversations because he had not read the speech, but he emphasized that their conversations were in general terms. Bonner said he had offered the Congressman his aid in the proposed investigation of the case.

During his speech Monday, Hoffman admitted that he sent several thousand copies of the "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech to a Mrs. Bethune, to be mailed to members of the Dames of the Loyal Legion, whose president Mrs. Letitia Goode, was called before the grand jury last autumn.

British Mass For New Blow At Rommel

Chad area in equatorial Africa, said the flying column of legionnaires and native troops had occupied Murzuch, religious capital of Fezzan, 480 miles south of Tripoli, and Sebha, the chief military center, 80 miles farther north.

The communique said one forward spearhead drove on northward and routed an Axis motorized detachment, and was reported now only about 300 miles from Tripoli.

Fire Set in Naples

The Cairo communique of the United States Air Force telling of the Liberator raid on Naples said harbor installations and shipping were hit and a "very large fire" was seen to penetrate the haze which obscured observation of other results. The Italians said some buildings collapsed and 23 persons were killed and 75 injured.

A North African communique said the Fortresses also attacked Gabes, where a railway bridge was hit, while Lightning P-38 fighters shot down three Axis transport planes off Tunisia.

From Cairo, the British reported continued activity along the road between Misurata and Tripoli, where some of Rommel's forces apparently have been moving westward, and announced fresh bomber assaults on Sousse in Tunisia and a transport column between Gabes and Sfax, the land link between Rommel and Nehring.

Dispatches from the front at Bou Arada, where the British reported a successful action, said the Germans were driven off a hill and a farm onto another hill across a narrow, stony valley. The British at once prepared both for further attack and for an Axis counterattack.

Both these actions were in an area where the Germans apparently had tried to flank the Allied positions at Medjez-El-Bab.

Kuhn, Bund Head, Met Hitler, Says Witness at Trial

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Fritz Kuhn and other German-American bundists were received by Adolf Hitler in the chancellery in Berlin in August, 1936, a former bund leader testified today.

Karl Weiler of the Nassau County Unit told of the meeting while testifying in the denaturalization trial of Kuhn and 19 other members of the Nazi organization.

Another Government witness was John C. Metcalfe, correspondent for the Chicago Daily Times, who testified that he joined the Astoria, Queens, bund unit in 1937 after his newspaper had assigned him to investigate bund activities.

Speakers of bund gatherings predicted there would be "bloodshed on the streets of America" and that the bund would rise up and fight "to save America from communism," Metcalfe testified.

WLB Demands Coal Strike End

last October, at which the strikers contend the anthracite districts were not properly represented—was the direct cause of the strike, but the wage issue now has assumed major importance.

The WLB telegram was sent to Lewis, 22 secretaries of local unions involved in the work stoppage, and the Glene Alden Coal Co., Hudson Coal Co., Luzerne Anthracite Co., Susquehanna Collieries Co. and Lehigh Valley Coal Co.—the companies named in the certification from Miss Perkins.

It said:

"The National War Labor Board unanimously calls upon all striking employes of the anthracite coal industry in Pennsylvania to return to their jobs immediately.

Patriotic Appeal

"The board is satisfied that when these men realize the dire consequences of their strike upon the war effort and the well-being of their fellow citizens, they will rise to their patriotic obligations and produce the coal so vitally needed for the protection of the American people and the defeat of the Axis powers.

"This strike is in direct violation of the national policy that there shall be no strikes for the duration of the war. Anthracite coal stockpiles are at a critically low level, endangering the health of our people and the prosecution of the war.

"This strike against the Nation at war must be ended at once. Unless this threat to the safety of our Nation is immediately terminated, the board will exercise all powers within its jurisdiction to fulfill its obligations to the country."

Canadians on Strike

Sydney, Nova Scotia, Jan. 12 (AP). Protesting a steel commission majority report recommending no changes in basic wages of steel workers, 5000 men struck today at the huge Dominion Steel & Coal Corp. plant.

The steel commission, headed by Justice J. H. Barlow of the Ontario Supreme Court in its majority report two days ago recommended that no increases be made in basic wages except for certain categories of maintenance men.

At Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, the Sault local of the United Steel Workers of America also voted at a mass meeting tonight to call a strike Thursday in the Algoma Steel Corp. mill.

closing of nonessential establishments to save manpower.

Among the proposals being considered is one to slash by 50 per cent the oil available to a long list of nonessential users. Another proposal is to leave certain nonessential operations entirely without oil.

This approach has been taken because the heavy "residual" fuel oils generally used industrially are in short supply—somewhat shorter than either heating oil or gasoline.

Congressmen Toss Donations On Capitol's Victory Book Pile

Members of Congress did their bit for the Victory Book Drive yesterday, tossing their spare reading matter into a big pile in the Capitol's Statuary Hall for transfer to service camp bookshelves.

Some of said reading matter was really spare, too.

As a result of the congressional contributions, some lucky private—tired out after a day on the obstacle courses—will soon be able to curl up in a cozy corner with such a relaxing volume as "Capital Expansion, Employment and Economic Stability."

If he prefers something a little meatier, he'll be able to turn to "Four Centuries of Kansas," or perhaps "World Metric Stabilization."

At the bottom of the stack was discovered "Cases on Public Service Carriers and Innkeepers," probably intended for the law student whose legal learning was interrupted by greetings from the President or maybe for innkeepers who enlisted to escape laysuits.

To be fair with the legislators, a goodly portion of less esoteric literature also was donated. Representative Sam Weiss (Democrat) of Pennsylvania brought in two big piles of mystery stories and novels. There were a number of copies of the classics, modern novels and humorous works like those of Cornelia Otis Skinner, James Thurber and Will Rogers.

But mischief-minded newsmen, who pawed over the pile of books along with soldiers sent to have pictures taken with legislators and then help carry away the loot, kept turning up titles like these: "Patents and Industrial Progress," "Mormon Settlement in Arizona," "Railways of Thirty Nations" and "Fundamentals of Botany."

One anonymous member's donation, done up in a neat bundle, consisted of one copy of the West Virginia Bluebook for 1941 and two back copies of the Congressional Directory.

The soldier bound for foreign duty will undoubtedly find three of the volumes very useful, however: "You Can't Do Business with Hitler," "Tales of the South Seas" and "How to Win Friends and Influence People."

Anyway, the boys will know what their Congressmen were up against. Somebody tossed in a copy of "The Legislative Way of Life."

Dr. Kelly Dies; 1 of 'Big 4' at Johns Hopkins

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 12.—Dr. Howard Atwood Kelly, 84, internationally known medical authority, and member of the "big four" of the original Johns Hopkins Medical School faculty, died today after a brief illness.

Mrs. Kelly, a patient at the same hospital, died six hours later without knowing her husband already was dead. Both had been unconscious for several days.

The couple was married in Danzig, now Germany, in 1888. Mrs. Kelly had been an invalid for several years.

At Union Memorial Hospital where Dr. Kelly was a patient for the past week, death was ascribed to a heart condition complicated by his advanced age.

He was born in Camden, N. J., February 20, 1858. He was known chiefly in his profession as a surgeon of the abdominal region and when he was but 28 years old became professor of gynecology and obsterics in Johns Hopkins, which was then organizing.

Other members comprising the so-called "big four" of the medical school faculty were the late Dr. William Osler, later Sir William Osler; Dr. William H. Welch and Dr. William T. Halstead.

Until his retirement several years ago, Dr. Kelly was active head of the Johns Hopkins department of gynecology and became professor emeritus in 1919. He was a pioneer in the use of radium for the treatment of cancer and wrote many books and articles dealing with a wide field of medical subjects.

Dr. Kelly also was an authority on poisonous snakes and a militant prohibitionist.

Dr. and Mrs. Kelly are survived by nine children; Miss Olga Elizabeth Bredow Kelly, Henry Kuhe Kelly of Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Henry G. Seibels of Birmingham, Ala.; Friederich Heyn Kelly of Bel Air, Md.; Howard Atwood Kelly of Baltimore; Dr. Edmund Bredow Kelly, now in Australia, and Mrs. Winthrop K. Coolidge of Chicago.

Mrs. Moorhead Succumbs at 79 In Pennsylvania

Mrs. Emma Moorhead 79, resident of this city until several years ago, died in Bethlehem, Pa., Monday, according to word received here by her daughter, Mrs. Darrell H. Smith, 3745 Oliver Street Northwest, wife of the comptroller of Brookings Institution.

Mrs. Moorhead, a widow since the turn of the century, lived in Washington nearly 20 years after coming here in 1921. She will be buried in her native city, Pittsburgh, Pa., in Alleghany Cemetery.

Surviving besides Mrs. Smith are two other daughters, Mrs. Orrin S. Braden of Beaver, Pa., and Miss Elizabeth Moorhead of Bethlehem.

Services Held In St. John's For Mrs. Dodge

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Knowlton Dodge, widow of Col. Harrison Howell Dodge, superintendent of Mount Vernon estate for more than 50 years, were held yesterday at 2 p. m. at St. John's Church here. Burial was at Pohick Church, where George Washington once was a parishioner and Colonel Dodge was buried in state in May, 1937.

Mrs. Dodge, who died Monday at her home, 2016 R Street Northwest, after a long illness, came to Washington shortly after the Civil War.

Daughter of the late Lincoln Brown and Lucretia Wolcott Knowlton of Massachusetts and Connecticut, respectively, Mrs. Dodge outlived four of her six children. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Elvin Ragnvald Heiberg, 2016 R Street Northwest, and Mrs. William Strong Cushing, Groton, Mass.

Also surviving are 11 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren. Among the grandchildren are Col. Harrison H. D. Heiberg and Col. Elvin Heiberg 2d, both of the United States Army; Mrs. Eleazar Parmly 3d, of the R Street address; Harrison H. D. Walker, war correspondent in Australia; Mrs. Edgar J. Tracy, jr., Mrs. Joseph M. Carey 3rd; Mrs. Philbrook Cushing and Miss Elizabeth Lee Cushing, who is overseas with the Red Cross.

C. C. Dobie Dies; Mystery Writer Left Own Puzzle

San Francisco, Jan. 12 (AP).—A noted California writer who specialized in digging out bizarre and puzzling tales of the State where he was born died yesterday and left a mystery of his own for somebody else to solve.

He was Charles Caldwell Dobie, 60, and the final conundrum of his life was: Where did Dobie leave the partly finished manuscript he hoped would be his literary masterpiece?

It was a half-told tale of California's Russian River country, and it's lying on a desk in Dobie's secluded study somewhere in San Francisco. Not even his brother, Clarence, who found him unconscious and dying in their Green Street flat, knows where the study is situated.

Guiterman, Light Versifier, Is Dead at 71

Arthur Guiterman, 71, writer of light verse, widely traveled lecturer and playwright, died Monday night in Pittsburgh, several hours after collapsing of a heart attack on his way to deliver a lecture.

Mr. Guiterman was to have spoken on "Brave Laughter" at the Twentieth Century Club there that evening. Born in Vienna, Austria, of American parents, the poet was a descendant of one of the oldest Dutch New York families. That city had continued as his headquarters, though he usually spent his summers in Vermont and part of each winter in Florida.

Best known as a graceful occasional poet, Guiterman was also a patriotic champion of justice and liberty in his writings. One of the best known of this type of poem from his pen was "Death and General Putnam," the school book favorite.

His lighter side, which has been described as "a crab apple sense of humor—a little tart," produced "The Antiseptic Baby and the Prophylactic Pup" among other verse. He also wrote the libretto for Walter Damrosch's opera, "The Man Without a Country," which was produced by the Metropolitan.

Mr. Guiterman was president of the Poetry Society of America from 1925 to 1927 and during the same period of the Author's League Fellowship. He also belonged to the Authors' League of America.

T. Austin Finch Rites Set Today In North Carolina

Funeral services for T. Austin Finch, 52, president of the Thomasville Chair Co., who died Monday of a heart attack in Thomasville, N. C., will be conducted in that city this afternoon.

Mr. Finch, who had many friends in Washington, where he frequently visited, had been with Thomasville Chair Co. since 1901. He became secretary-treasurer of the firm in 1914 and its president in 1929. He also was vice president of the High Point, Thomasville & Denton Railroad, president of the First National Bank of Thomasville, and a member of the board of governors of the American Furniture Mart.

His Washington connections were widened through his activities as a member of the old NRA Industrial Advisory Board and of the Department of Commerce Business Advisory Council, of which he had been a member since 1933.

Rites to Be Held Friday Morning For Miss Kennelly

Funeral services for Miss Mary F. Kennelly, native of Washington, whose family had lived in the Capitol Hill section more than four decades, will be held at 8:30 a. m. Friday at her home, 225 Second Street Southeast. Requiem mass at St. Peter's Church, Second and C Streets Southeast, will follow at 9 a. m. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Surviving are three sisters, Miss Margaret A. Kennelly, Miss Anna M. Kennelly and Miss Rose A. Kennelly, and a brother, John Joseph Kennelly, all of this city.

Funeral Rites for Mrs. Nusbaum

Fneral services for Mrs. Minnie Nusbam, 56, wife of David H. Nusbaum, Washington tailor for many years, were conducted yesterday at the Bernard Danzansky & Son funeral home, 3501 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Burial was in Beth Sholom Cemetery.

Mrs. Nusbaum, who died Monday at her home, 4022 Georgia Avenue Northwest, came from Austria-Hungary when she was 16 years old to live with relatives in New York. She became a citizen through her husband, to whom she was married 39 years ago. They came to Washington 13 years ago.

Surviving besides her husband are six daughters, Mrs. Isaac Schwartz, Mrs. Leon Malkin, Mrs. Herbert Milwit and the Misses Rose, Reba and Hannah Nusbaum, all of Washington, and three sons, Benjamin and Clement Nusbaum, of this city, and Max Nusbaum, Camp Davis, N. C.

Asthma Mucus Loosened For Thousands By 1st Dose of Mendaco

If you suffer from choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma, here is good news for you. A prescription called Mendaco perfected by a physician in his private practice contains ingredients which start circulating thru the blood within a very short time after the first dose, thus reaching the congested Bronchial tubes where it usually quickly helps liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. Fortunately Mendaco has now been made available to sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma thru all drug stores and has proved so helpful to so many thousands it is offered under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. You have everything to gain, so get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c. The guaranteed trial offer protects you.

If You Get Up Nights You Can't Feel Right

If you have to get up 3 or more times a night your rest is broken and it's no wonder if you feel old and run down before your time. Functional rather than organic or systemic Kidney and Bladder trouble often may be the cause of many pains and symptoms simply because the Kidneys may be tired and not working fast enough in filtering and removing irritating excess acids, poisons and wastes from your blood. So if you get up nights or suffer from burning, scanty or frequent passage, leg pains, backache, or swollen ankles, due to non-organic or non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles, you'll make no mistake in trying the prescription called Cystex. Because it has given such joyous, happy relief to so high a percentage of such cases, Cystex is sold under a guarantee of money back on return of empty package unless completely satisfactory. Cystex costs only 35c at druggists.

Here's How I Licked Wartime Constipation!

It was easy after I was told it's often due to lack of "bulk"

"Seems like I was always 'dosing' up on account of constipation. That sort of stuff gets a fellow down.

"Then a friend pointed out that these war days were upsetting our whole way of living. Particularly in how we eat. Said I ought to take care my meals were properly balanced—and make sure I got plenty of 'bulk.' Because lack of 'bulk' is one of the common causes of wartime constipation. Those medicinal laxatives gave me only temporary relief; they didn't get at the cause.

"But, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN really fixed me up. It corrects this kind of constipation by supplying 'bulk.' And it tastes swell, too. Just eat it regularly and drink plenty of water. ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek."

They are Telephone Information Operators and they answer an average of 42,000 calls each day for numbers which are plainly listed in the directory.

To answer this flood of unnecessary calls requires the equivalent of the full working time of seventy-five trained operators and ties up many lines and much equipment.

This is a serious waste of telephone time and telephone facilities in these busy war days when every trained operator and every facility is needed to handle the huge daily volumes of calls.

So, before calling, please consult the telephone directory and do not ask the Information Operators to look up numbers for you unless you cannot find them in the book.

9 Women Sit On Tentative Flynn Jury

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 12.—Women predominated in the jury box at the close of two days of questioning veniremen in the trial of Errol Flynn, movie actor charged with three counts of statutory rape.

After 19 prospective jurors had been examined by counsel for the State and defendant, 9 women and 3 men remained seated, all but 1 of the women having been accepted tentatively by both sides. Of the women, all but one are married or widowed.

Questioning of the veniremen continued to give an occasional hint as to the nature of the evidence to be introduced by each side.

Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler emphasized the State must prove the two complaining witnesses—Betty Hansen, 17-year-old Lincoln, Nebr., schoolgirl, and Peggy La Rue Satterlee, 16-year-old Hollywood entertainer—were under 18 years of age.

"You will give consideration to all the evidence on both sides as to age?" he asked one prospective juror, then added: "It's a basic question in a charge of rape."

California Age Limit

Statutory rape under California law involves solely proof of a sexual act with a girl under 18. Consent is not involved.

"Just because of the fact that the defendant is an actor and identified with Hollywood and the motion-picture industry does not lead you to assume that they have any different set of morals than others in the community?" Giesler asked another venireman.

Prospective jury members were in agreement that familiarity with the romantic adventures of the defendant on the screen would have no effect on their judgment.

Each side had exercised three of the peremptory challenges of the 10 it is allowed, and the laborious task of selecting the jury seemed likely to extend well into the third day of the trial.

Movie Employes Challenged

Of the three veniremen peremptorily challenged by the State, two have relatives employed in the motion picture industry. Of the three prospective jurors removed from the box on peremptory defense challenges, two were elderly men, one a widower with a 40-year-old son and the other with only a wife.

Excused under the State's first peremptory challenge was Nathaniel L. Manheim, former export manager in a film studio's New York office. Two others on the jury have acknowledged that they have relatives in movie studios, but all agreed it would not affect their deliberations. Manheim is a brother-in-law of Irene Manning, an actress at Flynn's studio.

The trial continued to draw a capacity audience, with a number of would-be watchers, mostly women, turned away. Miss Satterlee charges she was raped twice during a cruise on Flynn's yacht Sirocco, in August, 1941. Miss Hansen accuses the actor of raping her last September during a party at the home of Fred McEvoy, wealthy British sportsman.

Red Cross Reports on Aid to War Prisoners

Through observance of the Treaty of Geneva, signed in 1929, or partial observance by those not official signatories, prisoners of war—civilians and servicemen—are being communicated with and cared for reasonably well, the Red Cross reported yesterday.

Miss Martha Ellesor, of the staff of the National American Red Cross Inquiry Service, said interest in the well being of prisoners had increased considerably in the United States since Pearl Harbor, prior to which only a casual interest was manifest.

Germany and Italy have thus far permitted the Red Cross to distribute mail and parcels to prisoners of war in accordance with the Treaty of Geneva, she said; and Japan has agreed to abide by its terms regarding treatment of these captives.

However, she pointed out, the Red Cross has not been able to deliver messages or packages to prisoners in the Philippines, Malaya and the Dutch East Indies, but negotiations are still under way.

Miss Ellesor disclosed that no prisoner of war, under the Treaty of Geneva, could be imprisoned as a criminal and that captives must be given the same type of food as the servicemen of the country in which they are interned.

As to the whereabouts of prisoners, Miss Ellesor said, the treaty requires that immediately upon capture a prisoner's location must be provided the International Red Cross by the capturing country. Then the Red Cross informs the proper authorities.

Letters to prisoners may be sent through the Red Cross when the sender has the number and camp of the addressee. The number of letters which a prisoner may send out is determined by the country holding him. Cables may be sent only in case of emergency, she revealed.

Although the American Red Cross no longer accepts money for individual packages, she said, a person may contribute money to the local chapter and the money will be used to buy packages for the prisoner. Further information regarding prisoners may be obtained through the Foreign Inquiry Service of the District Red Cross.

If you can't get that—try this

Even though our food dealers' shelves are likely to take on the appearance of Old Mother Hubbard's cupboard during this wartime period, it is still up to the homemaker to keep the family fare in balance with sufficient vitamins, minerals, and other body-building indispensables.

It may mean changing your food habits, but you CAN keep your family well fed in face of limited selections.

FOR YOUR DAILY QUOTA OF VITAMIN A
... Look to your dairy products, eggs, sundry meats such as liver, heart and kidney, oily fish, leafy green and yellow vegetables. If one "A" food is not available, then turn to another.

GET YOUR VITAMIN B
... From whole grain cereals, enriched flour and bread, milk, eggs, liver, kidney, fruits, and vegetables. Think of these when lean meats are not available.

YOU'LL FIND VITAMIN C
... In oranges, lemons, grapefruit, tomatoes and berries. Leafy raw vegetables, especially cabbage, can be called upon for "C" should there be need.

MINERALS ARE NECESSARY
You won't have to go mining for these minerals. But they should be given careful consideration in the menu.

Calcium—Of course dairy products, especially milk and cheese, are the best source, but the pinch hitters are molasses, carrots, cabbage, broccoli, and dried figs.

Iron—Liver, heart and kidney are about the best sources of this all important mineral. But too, there's whole grain cereals, enriched flour and breads, lean meats, egg yolks and leafy green vegetables.

PROTEIN AND ENERGY FOODS
Proteins—These are the sustaining foods around which our menus are usually built. Meat, of course, is most universally favored. But when the family quota is exhausted, then think of the menu in terms of cheese, eggs, dried beans and nuts. They do a similar job as meat, and you'll find some of them available.

Energy Foods—Somehow or other, we seem to get our share of these, so there's no need for worry here. Breads, desserts, potatoes, in other words, starches and sweets, are seldom neglected on any menu.

WE'VE PLENTY TO EAT
There are plenty of nourishing, appetizing foods to be had. It is a matter of manipulating the menu to include all the nutritional necessities. Julia Lee Wright's Family Circle articles are designed to help you adjust your cookery to a wartime basis. You'll benefit by watching for them weekly, and clipping them for future reference.

A new series in new dress has just been started. Get your copy of THE FAMILY CIRCLE MAGAZINE Tuesday and start your series from the beginning.

Does Your SCALP Annoy You, Too?

It doesn't inspire confidence in your own methods of hair and scalp hygiene to be continually annoyed with an itchy scalp, dandruff and falling hair. In fact, it should convince you that your hair and scalp require more affirmative care than you are giving them.

Why not do what hundreds of Washington men do ... entrust their hair problems to F. D. Johnson? There is no charge for examination and treatment will not be advised unless Johnson believes it will help you. Phone NA. 6081.

Howard A. Kelly

Dr. Howard Atwood Kelly, who died yesterday in Baltimore full of years and honors, had one of the greatest names in the history of modern medicine and more particularly of modern surgery. It was a name that will always be linked with those of Osler, Halstead and Welch. These four were the original faculty heads at the Johns Hopkins University Hospital and Medical School who did so much to carry the fame of that institution into every corner of the world. Both Osler and Welch have testified that in the creation of this fame Kelly did more than any of the rest of them.

Certainly of the four Dr. Kelly was the most complex and arresting personality. His enthusiasm extended into many fields besides gynecology and surgery—into botany, natural history, anthropology, politics and religion. In surgery he was a great innovator. His techniques for abdominal operations were for their day daring and amazingly successful; Osler said he had never seen anything like them for skill. He was one of the first in this country to use radium in the treatment of cancer. But by contrast his religion was a mixture of fundamentalism and old-fashioned muscular Christianity. Like his contemporary, Teddy Roosevelt, he had been a cowboy in his youth, for reasons of health; and it is said that he spent the evenings round the campfire on the range discussing the Bible. He accepted the literal interpretation of Genesis so far as it concerned the creation of man and permitted himself to be elected to the board of the William Jennings Bryan University at Dayton, Tenn. By the same token he favored prohibition and "blue" Sundays. On all such questions he was continuously vocal. In the big reform wave of the '90's and early 1900's Dr. Kelly became one of its leaders in Maryland. He crusaded personally, continuously and effectively against dishonest elections and against organized vice.

These qualities seem much less contradictory today than they did to some of Dr. Kelly's contemporaries three or four decades ago. Today the optimistic faith in salvation through science does not run so high as it once did, and most thoughtful men would agree with this great medical scientist that scientific experience is on a "lower level" of truth than spiritual experience as recorded, for example, in the Bible. Thus the chief quality of Dr. Kelly's intellect was not its contradiction but its enthusiasm. It was an enthusiasm that sometimes led him to extremes.

Sovereign China

The treaties signed at Washington and Chungking this week abolish all the limitations upon China's sovereignty arising from the special rights enjoyed by foreigners in China. This is the way that the peace can be won in wartime. Some time ago the United States and Britain pledged themselves to abandon this privileged position in China. Wisely they have not contented themselves with half measures, but have written their renunciation into a treaty. Thus at one swoop, the treaty-port arrangements, the system of foreign concessions, the rights stemming from the Boxer Protocol of maintaining American and British troops in China, the existence of such special enclaves as the International Settlement at Shanghai and Amoy, the right of foreigners to be governed by their own and not Chinese laws, are all done away with. Existing rights or titles of American and British nationals with regard to real property in China are, to be sure, declared "to be indefeasible." But such property is henceforth to be subject to Chinese laws regarding taxation, national defense and eminent domain.

Whatever their original justification may have been, these special rights and privileges enjoyed by foreigners in China were the vestigial remains of an imperialist order in China out of harmony with the times. Thus they had become a bar to good relations between China and the Western democracies. Their anachronistic nature has been doubly underlined by the facts that China is a fighting ally of Britain and America and that China is now one with the other signatories of the Atlantic Charter. No happier way of showing our determination to see that that charter is carried out could have been found than by placing the legal relationship between China and the Western democracies on a basis of full reciprocal equality. Every American will share with Secretary Hull the satisfaction he has expressed over the removal of an incubus of the dead past.

United Nations

So many generalities have been uttered of late about the need for a reformed world organization that we are apt to forget that such a body is already in existence. We refer, of course, to the United Nations. In this group no fewer than 30 nations are joined together, and that is a sizable nucleus for an organization embracing the entire world. To be sure, the United Nations was set up primarily to wage the war as a global unit. But by the very nature of this war the United Nations is assured of a life after the close of hostilities.

For all those who talk about the problems of peace are thinking in terms of a continuum between peace and war. Mr. Sumner Welles speaks of the prospect of a long armistice. Mr. Hoover says he would leave out an armistice altogether and substitute a preliminary declared peace to be followed by a cooling off and a deliberative period for the major questions. Others have looked with both Mr. Welles and Mr. Hoover to a period of preparation before the world can settle down again to a peaceful environment. That means there can be no demobilization of the controls set up by the United Nations. Why, therefore, can we not tie our hopes and our plans for a new world society to this organization, and, what is more important, prepare right now for the task of setting it up?

This need would be met by Mr. Willkie's suggestion that the United Nations establish a kind of executive committee. Mr. T. V. Soong, China's Foreign Minister, had already made the same proposal. The job of this executive committee in reference to world organization would merely be to prepare the groundwork for the submission of some new world constitution to the represented governments. Informally the job is being undertaken by many private groups. All manner of schemes are now in process of ventilation and exploration for insuring world order when the bloodletting is over—schemes ranging from balance of power theories of the geopoliticians to a world parliament such as has just been advocated by Governor Stassen of Minnesota. An executive committee of the United Nations could not, of course, be expected to correlate all this activity. Nor could it bind the member governments to any formal acceptance in advance of any proposals which might come out of its deliberations. As Senator Taft has made clear, the Senate of the United States must eventually pass upon Mr. Roosevelt's commitments when they take treaty form. But it could use the material which has already been assembled by others. And this material could be developed into some workable system of world order for eventual submission to the governments concerned.

Maybe such an undertaking might seem premature and politically delicate. We do not share such a view. The task of catching the hare seems to be getting less difficult now that the armies and factories of the United Nations are generating momentum. What to do with the hare seems much more difficult; that is to say, how we are going to treat our enemies, how we are going to keep the peace and distribute justice, and how we are going to live together in the fast-shrinking world. As for the delicacy of such discussions, the chief difficulty is doubtless in the capital of the United Nations here in Washington. The objection may be entered that a political controversy might get started which would hamper the activity of war. But the old isolationists already are on the offensive. The maneuvers of the isolationists, indeed, are reminiscent of the days before Pearl Harbor when they saddled on the country the "policy" of neutrality which came so close to handing over to our enemies the control of all the seas washing our shores. In those days the counterpolicy of the Administration was merely a rearguard action. It went from compromise to compromise with men whose lack of common sense, let alone vision, has been demonstrated by events. It would be foolish to copy these tactics in resisting the fresh maneuvering of men who are seeking even in our war of survival to undermine the United Nations and to lead this country back to an exposed storm cellar. We should merely invite a fresh catastrophe.

Such an executive committee as is now proposed might also be armed with a mandate in connection with the prosecution of the war. As the experience in North Africa testifies, political as well as military problems bestrew the path to the enemy capitals. They must be handled authoritatively. It is cardinal United Nations doctrine, to be sure, that the peoples whom we intend to liberate shall set up governments of their own choosing when they are free to do so.

But what about the interim? An executive committee of the United Nations might have been the court of reference in the dispute between the Soviet Union and the Yugoslav government-in-exile on the partisan versus Mihailovitch clash. It might have been useful in the ticklish situation in North Africa. Certainly General Eisenhower would be helped tremendously by having at his side a sort of United Nations Ambassador-at-Large with a name and a reputation which would inspire general confidence. In this country there are such candidates in the persons of men who have not yet been used in our war effort. They could be appointed by the executive committee that Mr. Willkie has in mind. The fact is that unless some such body is set up, harmony in fighting the war as well as in insuring "a decent and durable peace" will be endangered.

Hard Choice

Very shortly the President of the United States must make a decision as fundamental as any yet forced by the pressure of war upon any official in any country. Mr. Roosevelt must decide which of four programs, each of vital importance in winning the war, must suffer from lack of materials. There will not be sufficient quantities of certain critical materials this year to build all the cargo vessels demanded by the war, to construct enough naval escort vessels for convoys, to put up plants for making the high-octane gasoline we need, and to build the factories for making synthetic rubber in the necessary quantity. It will be the President's difficult task to decide how materials shall be distributed among these four important projects.

The decision is forced upon the White House by no petty squabble among bureaucrats. This is no mere jurisdictional dispute. It is the result of an impasse into which the United States has been driven by the success of the enemy's submarine warfare. Submarine building is now Germany's No. 1 undertaking. She is said to be building five times as many submarines as we are sinking. To be sure, she must be having trouble in training first-class crews for her "silent service." But the fact remains that the boats are being launched in increasing numbers. And, though we are ourselves building more tonnage than the Nazi subs are sinking, yet the vessels lost make an impressive showing. At present rates of sinkings 12 to 15 million tons of cargo vessels must be built this year to gain two million tons. This is a grave situation. But it becomes graver when it is borne in mind that the need for cargo ships must increase. Not only will growing forces overseas need growing supplies but the people of liberated lands must be fed, clothed and perhaps armed, and more and more aid to England and Russia and China will be required.

This is the root of the difficulty which must weigh with the President as he makes his momentous decision. He knows how vital is the Battle of the Atlantic. He knows that we are not winning it. Cargo vessels must be built, and they cannot be sent to sea without armed protection, so escort vessels also must be built, requiring materials in proportion to the increase in cargo ships sent to sea. Yet the President also knows the vital nature of the other programs for synthetic rubber and high-octane gas plants. Allied air power, which is just beginning to make itself seriously felt, is definitely limited by lack of sufficient supplies of proper fuel. Rubber is just as much a key necessity. The entire production program itself, including production of cargo ships, escort ships and gasoline, depends upon manpower, and manpower must be carried to the factories on automobile tires, which in turn will depend upon the production of synthetic rubber before many months have gone by.

It would seem that the solution of all our other difficulties must wait upon the winning of the Battle of the Atlantic. Compromise and makeshift must suffice till this is done. But how allocate the materials in reference to such an order of priority? That decision requires great consideration. And the burden of making it, in our opinion, should not have been forced upon the President. It is disturbing that the President of the United States, harassed by manifold considerations of external and internal policy, world-wide strategy, and increasingly difficult politics at home, should have been called upon. That fact alone will reinforce the demand for some over-all board of control, with access to all available facts, able to prevision such dilemmas as that on which the Nation is now impaled and, above all, with authority to make decisions and make them stick. The issue at the White House is a forceful and painful reminder that our war organization is still too much body and not enough head.

Flynn Nomination

By Mark Sullivan

Senate Approval

ABOUT the appointment of Mr. Edward J. Flynn to be Minister-Ambassador to Australia, the momentary question is, Will the Senate confirm him? The practically universal judgment of thoughtful persons is that refusal of the Senate to confirm would be a tonic to the national spirit, a relief to the State Department and the Diplomatic Service, and a help to the morale of Government servants generally. It is a fair guess that it might also be a relief to President Roosevelt. In making the appointment, Mr. Roosevelt is paying a political obligation—and there are signs that he pays with a sour face, and only because the creditor pressed him hard. Last July there was a story that Mr. Flynn was to be made Ambassador to Mexico. Early publication of the story led to such protest, including from inside Mexico, that Mr. Roosevelt got a six months' extension on his debt. Whether the Senate will confirm Mr. Flynn is the question that momentarily rages. But the more permanent aspect of the Flynn appointment is the light it throws on the political situation in which Mr. Roosevelt now finds himself, in a long swing tide of American politics. This is important as respects the presidential politics of 1944, and for some years after.

Mr. Flynn is a type, a politician of the big cities, his practically lifelong career that of officeholder in New York. And Mr. Roosevelt is so involved with him and the background he reflects that it is necessary to give him a diplomatic post for which he is inappropriate. The appointment is made not only because Mr. Flynn wants it as reward. It is made also for the effect on leaders of other big city machines—upon whom Mr. Roosevelt feels it necessary to make an impression of living up to his political obligations. The Flynn appointment is made in the same spirit in which last July Mr. Roosevelt appointed a Federal judge to please the leader of the Jersey City political machine, Mr. Frank Hague. About that appointment, New Deal Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska said the appointee "is a pawn of the greatest political machine in the United States; he is a Hague nominee."

MR. ROOSEVELT'S principal political support is now composed mainly of two groups not only diverse but fundamentally opposed—the hard-boiled Hagues and the star-eyed Norrises. Utterly opposed to each other, they unite in supporting Mr. Roosevelt. He holds the Hagues and Flynns by patronage, the Norrises by idealistic policies.

In the beginning, and until recently, Mr. Roosevelt had a third group, the Midwest farmers. But in the congressional elections last November he lost them disastrously. In 12 Midwestern States, out of a total of 128 members of the House, the Democrats elected only 25, the Republicans 102. In those Midwest States, in the country and in Congress, Mr. Roosevelt has lost the farm and small-town rural vote. If a survey of last November's vote were made by counties, it would probably be found the Republicans carried 80 to 90 per cent of the counties (outside the solid South). The counties carried by the Democrats were mainly those containing big cities, such as the counties composing New York.

THE GROUPS remaining with Mr. Roosevelt—the big city machines and the ardent New Dealers—overlap the labor vote. So long as Mr. Roosevelt had these and the farmers, too, he was triumphant and he was master. With the farmers gone, it is doubtful—if indeed there is any doubt at all—whether he can continue triumphant in 1944. And when he is no longer triumphant, it is doubtful if he is master of the groups who still give him support. Today it is a question whether he leads them or follows them, commands them or obeys them. He feels obliged to give a city political leader a diplomatic appointment going counter to his sense of fitness.

The relations between Mr. Roosevelt and the labor leaders has become much the same. The labor leaders are supposed to be his following, and because of what he has done for them they ought to be. But as of today, the labor leaders do not do what Mr. Roosevelt wishes. On the contrary they embarrass him, go counter to his policies, resist the agencies he has set up to handle labor relations. As respects the labor leaders, Mr. Roosevelt is now in a position in which, to hold them, he is called upon to yield more and more.

No Filipinos Employed

Mr. Quezon has created the office of special services in Washington for the purpose of interpreting the ideals and sentiments of the Filipino people to the people of the United States, as well as of the rest of the world, by the publicity media, but contrary to all Mr. Quezon has said, is saying and will say about the ability of Filipinos to govern themselves, he has seen fit not to include any Filipino on the staff of this office of special services, thereby totally ignoring Filipinos who are capable of handling Filipino publicity from any angle. ## Lines Of Supply

By Paul Schubert

Can The Enemy Cut Them?

THE NEWS of recent days has been filled with episodes of supply line warfare. The campaign just put through in Papua saw MacArthur's forces perform a brilliant supply line job as well as a masterly combat job in driving the enemy out of Buna. Half way around the world our ships plod across the Atlantic in another supply line epic—a short time ago an important convoy reached the British Isles after beating off no less than 35 German U-boat attacks.

SCHUBERT

According to the President, the aerial supply line leading to China is now carrying more freight than ever rolled over the Burma Road. No one feels that this accomplishment, striking though it may be, represents anything like the tonnage of freight that we and our Chinese Allies can view with satisfaction. Nonetheless it is an accomplishment, and an earnest of our determination to lick the problem of supplying China's manpower with machine fighting power made in America's factories.

Around the north of Norway, another slender supply line has fed goods to Russia in spite of all enemy efforts to block it. In the western Mediterranean our ships now have the advantage of aerial "cover" from new airports in northwest Africa. Our aircraft fly across the South Atlantic and follow a trail of new airports to destinations in the Near and Middle East. Up the Persian Gulf go ships of the United Nations with freight for Teheran, Astrakhan and Moscow.

SUPPLY lines are one of three equally important factors in the waging of war: Production, supply, combat.

The power of America is born at home, on American soil. Our manpower resources are transformed, here in America, into trained production workers able to operate our factories and farms . . . into trained troops and marines able to use the weapons we make. This home job is the foundation of all our warmaking ability—the rifle shot fired in distant Papua is only an extension of power made in America.

As for the combat job—the extension—we understand clearly that the way to win wars is to do your fighting in places where it will hurt the enemy. To strike the enemy at his vitals. To fight offensively.

In total war like the present war, offensive action means action at a great distance from home—a distance so great that the supply line becomes a life line for the combat groups. In the present war the cutting of supply lines usually means the nipping off and annihilation of the forward troops fed by those supply lines.

There is reason to believe that our enemies dared attack us chiefly because they felt supremely confident of their ability to keep us from setting up supply lines.

We should not, they reasoned, be able to fight overseas, across the broad Atlantic and the broader Pacific. To fight overseas we should have to perform an impossible feat of shipping—a feat difficult enough in its own right as a transport problem, 10 times more difficult in view of Nazi U-boats, Japanese sea power and Axis aerial strength.

No, they felt sure we would have to stay at home, on the defensive—to employ our strength in a purely negative way. We wouldn't be able to punch, but would be reduced to the defense of our own vitals from such punches as our enemies chose to deliver.

WHAT the Axis didn't take into account is the fact that transport is the American specialty. The overcoming of physical obstacles of distance is the very essence of American national life. From the earliest days, we have moved goods across incredibly difficult terrain in the face of hostile action. Our school children thrill to accounts of the pony express, of covered wagons beset by savages, of clipper ships and the first transcontinental railway, of air mail and air liners.

The struggle to establish transport on this giant continent has made us great.

The struggle to establish world transport, now, and to do it in the face of hostile action, is making us greater still. At the present moment, in the course of a great war, we are working a transportation revolution that is going to have profound influence upon world life for the rest of this century, and we are hardly aware of it.

Each Atlantic convoy represents a new chapter in sea freight, while the aerial supply lines now in operation are the forerunners of aerial freight lines that will open up the last of the earth's wildernesses.

For us, the conquering of distance is solved by making new machines, and using them efficiently. The steam locomotive conquered the West as the covered wagon could never have done. Air transport conquered the Japanese at Buna, after the Japanese, using ground transport, had failed to win Port Moresby.

Our enemies have supply line problems, too.

They, too, have been on the offensive, and have operated combat troops at a great distance from home: Japanese at Buna and in the Solomons and in Burma, Germans in North Africa and deep in Russia.

While we are opening supply lines of our own, we are working ceaselessly to cut enemy lines. The U. S. Army is doing pretty well in the Pacific, turning to Japan's disadvantage the supply line warfare originally intended by Japan to hurt us alone. And the Russians in the Caucasus and the Ukraine . . . before the war is done the words "supply line" may become bitter words indeed to Adolf Hitler.

Virginia Has No Title

I read with amusement your editorial about Arlington County and was surprised at your attitude. Don't you realize that Virginia has no more title to that ground than I have to The Washington Post Building?

Any able lawyer can tell you that if three parties make a contract, it takes all three to break it; not two. Well, when the District of Columbia was laid out around 1800 it was created by agreement between Congress and Maryland and Virginia, namely three parties.

Everything went along beautifully until about 1846 when Virginia became dissatisfied because so little Federal money was being spent in Alexandria and asked Congress to cede back her part of the District of Columbia, which it did without consulting the Maryland Legislature.

No less a lawyer than Chief Justice Taft once gave his private opinion that such was the case. Why shouldn't Senator McCarran just ask the Supreme Court for an opinion and let it go at that.

I notice when he threatened once before with his bill that all of the officials from Arlington County and Alexandria rushed down to Richmond to see the Governor and he, knowing that what I have said was true, asked that the bill be delayed and succeeded in having it delayed.

Indorses Ryan Address

Never before have I written to a newspaper concerning an article appearing in the columns. But I have just read in your today's paper the story of Msgr. John A. Ryan's address to the American Catholic Sociological Society and wish to indorse every word that he said. Here is a manifesto that should be incorporated in the Nation's peace plan. I am waiting to see what you will say about it in your editorial columns. I am clipping and saving the article. I am an Augustana Synod Lutheran.

Audience Lacking

A short time ago I came to live in Washington from Buffalo, N. Y. In the past Buffalo has taken a sort of perverse pride in the fact that it was a "nonmusical" city. Nevertheless in the last five years under the brilliant leadership of its conductor, Franco Autori, the Buffalo Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra has risen to rank among the foremost of the younger orchestras in this country. Having long been associated with the Buffalo Philharmonic it was with great interest that I attended the opera performance sponsored jointly by the Philadelphia Opera Company and the National Symphony Orchestra Association.

The bill—Puccino's "Il Tabarro" and Menotti's "Old Maid and the Thief"—was certainly not hackneyed. Admission fees were most reasonable. The works were performed in English. Singers, orchestra and staging were all highly commendable. Only the audience was sadly lacking. Gaping holes in balcony and orchestra sections alike testified to the indifference of the people of Washington to the vital war asset which they possess in their own symphony orchestra.

Glorious Opportunity

The eyes of the world are upon the Seventy-eighth Congress, England wants to know the connection between the American Congress and the American people. China wants to know what an American promise means. We have sent our representatives to provide for the common defense and the general welfare of the United States.

Today, we, the American people, depend upon the principles upon which we founded this Nation to carry it on to a victorious peace. Congress' is the glorious opportunity. Our part is standing back of this body and do not doubt that we will do it. We give the password to the Capitol and it need not be whispered—"Courage."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey

Dear Harriet:

Inclosed you will find the latest snapshot of me. My hair looks different I know, but it ain't no pompadour. It stands on end now all the time from what I been through.

I tried to get the company barber, who is a swell blacksmith, to cut it down, but he says it is my nerves not my hair that is responsible and that he wood have to use the clipper on my nerves to get results, so I called the whole thing off.

There was a lot of places I figured I might wind up in in this globule war, but this place was not among 'em as a outside gess. I still have spells when I think I am in one end of a double-feature, only I don't see Charles Boyer and that LaMarr girl around nowhere and there is nobody playing no love scenes.

Whenever I see any movie pictures of this part of Africa it showed the place all cluttered up with beautiful adventuresses but this must of been strictly Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stuff. I have not seen no woman in two months who could charm anybody even if she had her face lifted and her store teeth fixed. Them Hollywood writers who write them Cassablanca pictures had never been out of California I gess.

There is a lot of excitement over here, a lot of it of a political nature. The French are with us on a caucus to caucus basis. They have to have speshul traffic routes so French leaders on the way to political conventions in the north or south won't collide with them going to meetings in the east and west.

I can't make out if they think Eisenhower is over here to win a war or to round up delegates to a couple of ward rallies. It seems everything is all mixed up politically among Frenchmen, and Mooney says that even when there is only two French generals at a meeting there is at least three people arguing.

The ones that played Vichy to win and place are sore at them which voted for it to show and they are all afraid of where they will wind up coming in so late with the Frenchmen that always said Petain wood not even finish in the money. I once seen a Democratic convention and thought it exciting, but a dozen French colonels and majors, each playing every man for himself, can make it look like a Easter egg rolling act.

If I could get a white sheet and a Turkish towel I wood disguise me as a Arab and join some native mounted troops. They got horses and horses is all that can get through the native mud except alligators of which there is none.

Well, that's all for now.

Love,
OSCAR.

I am in the mill again. I fired my rifle accidentally in a main street and 11 French leaders started shooting at each others in self-defense.

Vanishing Americanism

1—Popper, I wish we could have an auto, too.
2—Where's the road map? I wanna plan a tour.
3—Why don't you take a nice ride over the weekend?
4—This car will give you more pleasure than anything you ever owned, I'm telling you.
5—We did 400 miles the first day and 540 the second.
6—The train service to Miami is all right, but I love to go by auto.
7—What're you doing tonight? Wanna go for a ride?
8—Slow down to 50 miles per hour.
9—Oars Bought, Sold and Exchanged.
10—I just can't imagine what we would do if we didn't have a limousine.
11—We're putting up the sedan and just using the beach wagon.

Ima Dodo was found standing on a pier in a howling gale for several hours the other day. Asked the reason, she replied: "I'm conditioning myself to live indoors under the present heating rules."

Housing Shortage

Your editorial of January 4 headed "Critical Shortage," relating to housing, requires a reply.

Yes, there is a shortage of housing, but only so far as private homes and apartments are concerned. This problem could have been solved in a realistic manner if the officials had seen that thousands of apartments were available for families coming into Washington instead of permitting single girls to rent them and subrent them to other girls and young men as well.

Go out yourself and take a thorough look around and this is what you will find: There are thousands of rooms available for the young women who are to come into Washington and a little left over.

Let the officials in charge of admitting persons to occupy the dormitory projects and the prefabricated housing give preference to those applicants who are occupying apartments at the present time and you will then see how much the housing situation can be eased.

The New Budget

By Ernest Lindley

Test For The New Congress

THE DIMENSIONS of the new budget are determined by our estimated capacity to produce for war purposes. The estimated outlay for the war alone during the next fiscal year is approximately 100 billion dollars.

LINDLEY

This total may be increased later for one or both of two reasons. We may find that our effective production during the 12 months beginning July 1 exceeds present estimates. Or the prices of the goods and services which the Government buys for war use may rise more than the budget estimates.

And there is, of course, a possibility that this outlay can be decreased. If the European war should end at the end of 1943—ahead of present expectations—certain types of war production might be pared down during the early months of 1944. The destruction of Japan may not require such large land forces as are deemed necessary to guarantee the defeat of Germany. And, through experience and increasing efficiency of production, the cost of certain types of munitions may decline further.

THIS CONGRESS is economy-minded. We are likely to hear a great deal from the Capitol about trimming the budget. Congress could postpone certain war appropriations on the ground that they would not be spent for a year or more to come, anyway. The President acknowledges the obvious: that nobody can say now exactly what kinds and volume of war expenditure will be necessary 18 months ahead. But postponements by Congress are not savings. Savings can be made only by rapid progress on the battle front, and they cannot be substantial until at least one enemy has been completely defeated.

The so-called "nonwar" section of the budget is a relatively small rider to the 100 billion dollars for war. It includes items which cannot be cut, such as interest on the public debt and payments to veterans and their survivors, which now begin to rise again. Congress may be able to chip away a little here and there, although the President has jumped ahead in announcing the liquidation of some of the more costly relief activities, such as WPA and the food-stamp plan.

Every nonwar expenditure which can be cut, should be. The savings in dollars will be trifling, relative to the cost of war. But the savings in manpower and materials from eliminating or cutting down nonessential activities are important. Whether the Government has more employes than it needs is not so important in times of general unemployment, but now we cannot afford to waste the energy of a single person.

But any savings worth mentioning in the budget will not be made in the Appropriation Committees or in the consideration of appropriation bills by Congress. The most effective thing Congress can do to hold down the cost of the war is to see that nothing interferes with its most rapid and efficient prosecution. The next most effective is to prevent the price level from rising. If the prices of the things the Government needs are allowed to rise, the war will cost more. A serious inflation might increase the cost of the war by 25 to a hundred per cent. And even a fractional rise in the price level of war goods — including farm products—would more than offset any small dollar savings that might be made by abolishing a few jobs here and there.

Congress can also reduce the ultimate cost of the war to taxpayers by increasing taxes. The President estimates that only about one-third of the proposed expenditures for the next fiscal year will be covered by revenues from present taxes. Great Britain and Canada are covering more than half of their expenditures during the war by taxation. It would seem prudent for us to do at least as well.

INCREASED taxation, if properly devised, will also help to prevent inflation. Out of an estimated national income of 155 billion dollars or more, it should not be difficult to recover more than 50 billion dollars in taxes and forced savings. The money will be there and much of it will be an economic menace, since the civilian goods and services to spend it on will not be available unless it is siphoned off in taxes and compulsory savings. A small part of the additional 16 billions in taxes and forced savings proposed by the President can be obtained by closing the loopholes—such as the complete tax exemption of certain securities—in the income tax. Some can be obtained by increasing the income-tax rates generally, but most will have to come out of smaller incomes.

The new Congress faces many tests of the capacity of its membership to assume the place which the legislative branch should in the conduct of the war. The prestige of Congress is not restored by demands that legislators be treated with respect by carping at the "bureaucrats." An alert and discriminating Congress can do a great deal to tone up the executive branch and aid the prosecution of the war. But the real test of this Congress is whether it lives up bravely to its own responsibilities to put the national welfare first, or whether it repeats and magnifies the errors of its predecessor. This test will be especially severe in such matters as price control, rationing, and taxation, where it is only too easy for timid men and demagogues to cater to public misunderstanding and natural human desires.

Hoover Sees Nazis Wavering on Home Front

(This is the second in a series of six articles by Herbert Hoover written at the request of the Associated Press.)

By Herbert Hoover

All is not well on the German home front today. The blitz and terror which were to have won a short war have in a large sense failed. Germany has abandoned the hope that she can bring the war to a swift conclusion.

Warned by the collapse on the home front in the World War, the Germans this time made great preparations in expanded agriculture, in stored food, metals, textiles and in synthetic production of oil, rubber, explosives. On invasion of Norway, Holland, Belgium, Yugoslavia, France, Poland and the Ukraine, she seized their accumulated stores.

In consequence of this advance preparation and this robbery, Germany was not substantially short of supplies during the first two years of the war. But she has consumed her stocks and there is much less to be taken from the invaded countries. The tide has now turned on the home front and all the forces of internal degeneration are now in action.

By working millions of prisoners and imported labor, the Germans have kept up the bread, potato and vegetable supplies. The so-called normal bread and cereal ration amounts to a rate of about 260 pounds per person per annum, against 200 pounds the American people eat.

Meat and Fat Supplies

But the story in meats and fats is far different. The blockade has greatly reduced her imports of vegetable and fish oils and feed for her animals. Her animal products have greatly diminished.

All calculations of meat and fat supplies are very involved, but the following represent an appoximation and indicate the trend. In 1936 the Germans consumed at the rate of about 165 pounds of combined meats and fats of all kinds per person per annum. In 1939 the "normal" ration was at the rate of about 105 pounds, in 1940 about 91 pounds, in 1941 about 81 pounds and in 1942 it was about 70 pounds per annum. Hard workers get more. This does not indicate any substantial meat or fat supplies from the Ukraine.

At my direction after the last war an investigation of the food experience during the war indicates that the present amount of fats in their ration is below the full health level of the ordinary consumer.

But equally important is the degeneration of practically all other supplies for civilian use, including clothing and coal. The people suffer from cold in winter. Overcrowding is adding its miseries.

Manpower Weakening

The wear and tear on the railways and machine shops and their destruction by air attack are creating difficulties in transportation and manufacture. German manpower on the home front is weakening steadily despite forced labor from the occupied countries.

A work week of 60 hours is the minimum in factories, compared to our average of under 44 hours. The workmen are feeling the pressure of overwork. Germany is making frantic efforts to secure skilled manpower from the occupied countries.

Mentally the people have retreated from confidence of victory and have fallen back on resolutions of defense. They now realize that they are an island in a sea of 200 million invaded and starving people who hate them with an irreparable bitterness. And thus the Germans know the dream of the new order in Europe has vanished. The terrors of aerial bombardment and the losses in battle are having a depressing effect on the spirit of the people.

That the home front is far from contented is indicated by the Nazi fortifications of strategic buildings in preparation to quell civil disturbances and by the placement of Nazi generals in command of the armies over the older staff.

Offensive Still Sought

Further degeneration cannot be stopped. However, I do not believe the Germans will collapse again internally at the end of this their fourth winter in this war. But it is impossible for them to withstand indefinitely these pressures on the home front.

There is, however, at once a major reservation to this statement. Germany is still potent for offensive, and she is under tremendous pressures from the home front to break somewhere the ring which surrounds her.

The only direction she can gain substantial relief for the home front is to the southeast. If her armies could effect junction with the Japanese in the Indian Ocean by defeat of the United Nations in Persia or Egypt and India, they could open a new economic area from which great relief would come —rubber, metals and oil.

She could get food, particularly fats, fruit and sugar. She could lift her whole standard of living, and in such an event the home front would stiffen for an indefinite number of years.

Italian People Suffering

The Italian armies have been so repeatedly defeated in Africa that they have long passed their zenith. Italy's navy has been beaten in every first-class encounter. Her submarines are not so effective as the Germans'. Her airmen have proved inferior. Like Rumania and Hungary, she is only a military appendage to Germany.

Italy is suffering greatly from air raids and seems to have little resistance. She is short of many materials due to the blockade. In food, with a much lower normal standard of living, she is more nearly self-supporting than Germany. But with poor administration many of her people are suffering.

She has no coal or oil except such as the Germans give to her. Her clothing is in bad shape from lack of textiles. The winter will be the worst she has experienced. Thus on the home front, Italy has degenerated more than Germany. Her zeal for this war has never been extravagant. It is weakening despite stiffening by German personnel. Attrition is likely to produce results on Italy sooner than upon Germany.

Retail Food Prices Rise 16% in Year, 30% Since 1935-39

Retail food prices rose 16 per cent in the past year and in the 12 months ended November 15 stood 31 per cent above the 1935-39 average, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

For the most part, the board said, increases were much greater in commodities not subject to maximum retail prices and most of the increases shown by individual items occurred before they were subject to direct control.

Retail prices of livestock products, including meats, poultry and dairy products, and of fruits and vegetables have risen more since last spring than prices of any other foods, the board reported.

Coast Guard to Get Alger House

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—The house in which Horatio Alger wrote most of his rags-to-riches books, Newsboys' House, will be turned over to the boys of the Coast Guard tomorrow.

The seven-story structure which has sheltered thousands of lost, friendless and poor boys since its founding in 1872 will be used as a receiving and transfer depot for Coast Guard recruits, it was announced by the Children's Aid Society, which operates the institution.

Alger lived in the home and collected material from the boys for his popular tales. Many of the boys followed through and actually went on to fame and fortune.

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 12.—SPORTIN' AROUND: Tuffy Leemans fumbled the ball the first time he handled it and the last time he handled it, as a member of the New York Giants. Had a pretty fair career in between those seven years . . . We can sympathize with Sports Editor Bob Stedler (Buffalo Evening News) in his efforts to get Jimmy Collins, old-time third baseman, elected to baseball hall of fame. We've been trying to get another justly deserving old ball player, Clark Griffith, in that place for years. Griff and Collins can take some consolation in the fact that among those who haven't made the grade is Abner Doubleday. He only invented the game.

CONSIDINE

Whirlaway, greatest money winner of them all, has missed a chance to push his earnings to the $750,000 mark because of the Japs and gas-rationing. He missed out on the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and the $75,000 Hollywood Park Handicap, when the Jap-threat shut down California tracks last year and now the $25,000 Widener, would-be feature at Hialeah, is gone. Incidentally, we wonder how the horsemen are going to find shipping space for their nags, to get them out of Florida—and will vanning them to the horse parks come under the heading of pleasure driving? Also, will sports writers, telegraphers, sportscasters and handicappers be forbidden to drive their cars to tracks and ballyards this season?

With the Yankees all set to train at Asbury Park (N. J.) High School, the Red Sox at Tufts College, the Phils at Swarthmore, etc., etc., we're likely to be deluged with Moe Bergs. Managers, however, fear they'll all begin to hit like Moe, if they get his education . . . First Casualty of the 1943 baseball season will come, if reports that Joe McCarthy will lead the Yanks in calisthenics are true, on Joe's first full knee bend . . . First happy note in sports at Pitt in a long time was its basketball team's victory over West Virginia—college invitation tournament champions.

Among the fine athletes who overcame infantile paralysis and now boost the efforts of the national foundation for the fight against that disease is Heinie Brock, the droll skater with the Ice Follies . . . Helen Stephens, 1936 Olympics sprint champ, is helping Curtiss-Wright build fighting planes these days . . . Bill Smith, Hawaiian-Irishman, who holds more records than any other swimmer, took his first strokes in an irrigation ditch under the direction of a Japanese coach . . . Ray Barbuti, who was General MacArthur's favorite athlete when the General headed the 1928 American Olympic Team, officiated in a football game near the end of this past season, and a few days later was in Cairo. He's an air force captain.

Harry Traub, director of the Junior Minute-Men of Washington, D. C., a war bond selling group, has been after big league baseball owners to give free tickets to all who purchase bonds at booths to be erected outside of ballyards. Hasn't had much favorable response . . . Beau Jack's board of directors, bankers, brokers and big manufacturers, always pass on the matches which Chick Wergeles, the fighter's manager, schedules . . . former Middleweight Champion Ken Overlin dropped us a nice card from Midway.

G. W., Terps and A. U. Play Strong Opponents Tonight

Maryland has a three-game winning streak to Philadelphia to play the University of Pennsylvania; American U. entertains the U. of Baltimore in its last game for three weeks, and George Washington continues its road trip, meeting North Carolina Pre-Flight at Chapel Hill in games involving District collegiate courtmen tonight.

The Old Liners have run up a three-game winning streak over Richmond, North Carolina and Virginia and have shown a gradual improvement in each outing. Penn has been taking its knocks in its pre-Eastern League schedule with a club called below par of the usual Quaker outfits.

American University will be meeting up with one of its three victims in the clash with the Baltimoreans. The Eagles won, 69-43, in a previous meeting in Baltimore, but the visitors changed coaches over the holidays and showed enough improvement to hand Wilson Teachers a beating and give Washington College a close game before losing.

George Washington will be playing its fourth service outfit in the Pre-Flighters and its fourth different branch of the service. They have beaten the Army, Fort Meade; lost to the Navy, North Carolina Pre-Flight; lost to the Marines, Quantico, and now play the Air Corps.

American U. faces a three-week layoff after tonight's game for its usual examination period. The Eagles have won three and lost four to date and had one game canceled, with Swarthmore.

A. U. Coach Bernhard Kalijarvi has given George Zuras, the Eagles' new-found scoring star, all the credit for his sudden rise among the District scorers this year. Zuras has been clicking on both inside and outside shots for 122 points in seven games, an average of 17 points per game.

Paul Governali, Lion Star, Gets Maxwell Award

Philadelphia, Jan. 12 (AP).—"Passing Paul" Governali, Columbia University, soon to enter the Marine Corps, was honored tonight as the "football player of 1942" by the Maxwell Memorial Football Club.

Governali, who completed 87 of 165 passes for 1442 yards, including 19 touchdown aerials during the last season, received the award from President Bert Bell before a large crowd in the ballroom of the Hotel Warwick.

Fight Marks Bitter Battle Before 500

A wild and woolly finish marked a bitter basketball battle yesterday as Tech High, playing on its home court, eked out a 40-37 margin over St. John's before a gathering of 500 fans.

Though in front most of the way, the hosts weren't able to get the winning basket until only 35 seconds of play were left. Then Hank Pizza, shooting from off balance, dropped in a set shot that broke a 37-37 deadlock. Then the real fireworks started.

Tech's Clove Thompson was being guarded closely by little Tommy Cavanaugh when the invaders Paddy McCarthy rushed into proceedings, hung a sharp right on Thompson's chin. When the floor had been cleared McCarthy was waved out of play for the second time this year, guilty of two technical fouls, and Thompson followed. Each team was allowed two free throws on the double foul, Sleepy Thompson missing both for the Johnnies and Dan O'Connell sinking one for Tech.

St. John's scored the first four points of the game but was trailing, 6-4, shortly after the start of the second period. At the half the Johnnies were behind, 17-12, and though they were only a few points behind from then on, they didn't tie matters until three minutes of the game remained. Cavanaugh's long set shot made it 35-all, and Chuck Dudley matched Pizza's running bank shot to make it 37-all.

Pizza, shooting from every angle, led the victor's scoring with 15 points, two more than his lanky and effective teammate, Keith Harder. Rookie Juney Hassett poured in 11 points to pace the losing cause.

Fight Body Denounced By Attorney

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

A blistering denunciation of the District Boxing Commission yesterday was voiced in District Motions Court by Denny Hughes, attorney for Promoter Goldie Ahearn, before Justice James M. Proctor, which may well provide the spark which may set off the keg of powder upon which the boxing bosses are sitting.

No decision was reached on either of two motions before the court, Justice Proctor refusing, for the present, to rule on Ahearn's motion to restrain the commission from functioning until his $106,224.08 damage suit is settled and on the Boxing Commission's motion to dismiss the charges against the commission as a body and as individuals. He took both under advisement.

Hughes Flays Action

Hughes, who with T. Emmett McKenzie forms Ahearn's legal staff, heatedly charged the commission exceeded its authority in threatening to revoke Ahearn's permit to stage the boxing show at the last minute, contending the boxing bosses took it upon themselves to maintain Uline Arena as injurious to public health whereas they readily permitted fights to be staged at Turner's Arena, which he branded as "one of the worst places I have ever seen. A place where you would hesitate to take a lady."

Hughes told the court the real trouble started when Ahearn lowered his prices below the scale charged by Turner. When Ahearn refused to raise his prices as demanded by the commission, he contended the commission then used the "seats on flooring over the ice" angle as an excuse to try and stop Ahearn's show at the last minute.

Justice Proctor refused to grant the restraining order against the commission on the ground there was no immediate need of such action, inasmuch as Ahearn did not have a request for a permit before the boxing solons.

Motion Meets Opposition

The commission's motion for dismissal of Ahearn's damage suit, based on the fact the commission had acted entirely within its powers as the governing body of boxing, and therefore entirely within its right, met with stubborn resistance from McKenzie and Hughes, who contended the commission had exceeded its powers and acted maliciously in so doing.

Chester H. Gray, assistant corporation counsel, the commission's attorney, said the commissioners could not be sued as individuals and that the law, furthermore, clearly stated the commission could, at any time, revoke a permit for a boxing card.

McKenzie contended that in taking it upon itself to decide whether sitting on seats on flooring over the ice was injurious to health was not in the commission's province but rather was a matter for the health department and quoted Dr. George C. Ruhland's recent opinion that he (Ruhland) did not think seats as set up at Uline Arena were conducive to ill health. He pointed out that the commission had permitted previous shows at Uline Arena and that other shows had been held under the same conditions at Riverside Stadium. R. S. Wilson, acting director of the Bureau of Sanitation, was in the courtroom but was not called upon.

Later, in his chambers, Justice Proctor said it would require "several days" before he would reach a decision.

Anacostia Bows, 33-23, To Gonzaga

Gonzaga High quintet took a 33-to-23 victory over Anacostia's Indians yesterday afternoon on Gonzaga's floor, with Frank Cantrell taking scoring honors for the Purple with five baskets and four free tosses.

In the first 30 seconds of play Nat Caponiti, Indian guard, made the first point, but then Anacostia faltered to let the Purple have the lead, which they kept for the remainder of the game. The half ended 16 to 7 in their favor.

Yanks, Bosox Dominate '42 All-Star Team

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Jan. 12.—Featuring seven players selected for the first time, the annual major league all-star team, picked by 260 members of the Baseball Writers Association, was announced today by the Sporting News.

Two of the all-stars, Johnny Pesky and Tex Hughson, had the distinction of being chosen after their first full season in the big leagues.

The voting also brought belated recognition to Johnny Mize, Enos Slaughter and Mickey Owen, acclaimed the sophomore success of Ernie Bonham and marked the emergence of Morton Cooper as one of the best pitchers in baseball.

New Pitching Staff

Hughson, Bonham and Cooper gave the team an entirely new pitching staff.

With Bobby Feller and Cecil Travis in military uniform last season, the baseball writers made virtually a clean sweep of the 1941 all-stars by turning out three Brooklyn players, Pete Reiser, Dolph Camilli and Whitlow Wyatt, as well as Bill Dickey of the New York Yankees and Thornton Lee of the Chicago White Sox.

Honors for 1942 went to six players from the American League and five from the National, including three each from the Yankees and Boston Red Sox, two from the St. Louis Cardinals and one each from the Dodgers, Chicago Cubs and New York Giants.

The Selections

The line-up and season records:
First base—Johnny Mize, New York Giants, .305.
Second base—Joe Gordon, New York Yankees, .322.
Shortstop—Johnny Pesky, Boston Red Sox, .331.
Third base—Stan Hack, Chicago Cubs, .300.
Center field—Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankees, .305.
Right field—Enos Slaughter, St. Louis Cardinals, .318.
Catcher—Mickey Owen, Brooklyn Dodgers, .256.

W.-L. High Beaten, 37-13, By Eastern

Playing heads-up ball all the way, a speedy Eastern quintet walked away from Washington-Lee's Little Generals by a 37-13 margin yesterday as the losers opened their season at Lincoln Park. Despite Coach Ralph Guinther's using fresh reserves, the Easternites confused the opponent with a man-to-man defense for three quarters and a zone defense for the last one, and took their third successive triumph.

Colonials Cling to Last Of Long Lead

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 12.—George Washington University, which upset Duke last night, continued undefeated in the Southern Conference tonight by nosing out North Carolina in a 34-33 thriller that kept the 2500 yelling fans, mainly students and cadets, on edge throughout.

The Colonials meet the Navy Pre-Flight quint here tomorrow afternoon in the final game of their Southern trip.

Edsel Gustafson got hot the second half, caging six action throws from all angles, and paced the Colonials' triumph.

Fritz Nagy, flashy Carolina freshman, tied Gustafson for scoring honors with 15. Dick Hartley, Carolina's southpaw sophomore, was next with 12.

The first half was marked by fast, furious floor play and close guarding, but both teams were off at the basket, and the score was about the lowest seen here in recent years.

Carolina led most of the way, but Reichweins follow-up made it 9-9, and foul shots by Myers and Rausch gave the visitors an 11-10 lead at half.

The second half, paced by Gustafson, was neck-and-neck, with the lead changing over and over, down to 24-23.

Gustafson sank two shots and Rausch a crip to put the Colonials ahead 29-24, but Nagy made a shot and foul. Gustafson and Rausch again sent the Colonials ahead 34-27, but Hartley, Nagy and White put Carolina within one point, and the game ended with the Colonials freezing the ball and the Tarheels fighting furiously to break it up.

George Washington came near to losing on fouls. Carolina converted 9 of 14, George Washington 4 of 11. Both teams were off on action throws. The Colonials hit 15 of 67, the Tarheels, 12 of 48.

Nunnally Johnson Proves A Deft Plastic Surgeon

Remodels Tragedy Into Facile Comedy-Drama; Capital Twins to Appear With Helen Hayes; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IN ADAPTING Emlyn Williams' play of "Yesterday's Magic" to the screen under the title of "Life Begins at 8:30," Nunnally Johnson has rendered picture-goers a twofold service. To begin with, he has converted a morose and tragic drama into a reasonably enlivening comedy-drama by a few deft and not too violent twists of plot. This accomplished, he has further brightened the Williams script by the injection of an allopathic dose of his own particular form of brittle and sophisticated humor, generously tinctured with satire.

IDA LUPINO

Some of those at yesterday's preview of the picture, coming into Loew's Capitol tomorrow, felt almost persuaded that if the Theater Guild and Paul Muni had had the advantage of Mr. Johnson's version of the play, "Yesterday's Magic" might have fared better on the boards than it did.

Monty Woolley and Ida Lupino, in the pivotal roles of the fallen idol of the theater and his crippled daughter, played on the stage by Mr. Muni and Jessica Tandy, make their parts interesting and amusing without recourse to saccharine sentimentality and there is a newcomer in the leading juvenile role who will do with a bit of watching. Cornel Wilde is the name and it will become better and better known as time goes on and equally good assignments come his way.

A full review of "Life Begins at 8:30" will appear somewhere around here in due course. In the meantime, this is just a fragmentary reassurance for those who thought "Yesterday's Magic" a shade depressing. There will be no such reaction to the film.

Dean Murphy, the brilliant young impressionist who occupies a position of unique distinction as a favorite White House entertainer, has been signed to appear in the new "Ziegfeld Follies," opening in Boston on January 18 and coming later to the National, unless the bottom falls out of all present signs and portends. Master Murphy will not join the show until February 1, the beginning of its third week in the Hub, owing to previous commitments on Broadway. He should be with it when it reaches E Street—along with Ilona Massey, Milton Berle and Arthur Treacher. All this "by courtesy of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer," with whom Murphy recently signed a long-term contract which will become operative in Culver City in the spring.

Two More Capitalites Step Up

Word comes along from authentic sources that Gilbert Miller has signed Leonore and Betty Moerschelle, Washington twins, to play the twin daughters of Harriet Beecher Stowe in his production of "Harriet," starring Helen Hayes. For economy of printers ink and electric current, the girls have changed their name to Wade for purposes of the "big-time" theater. Their last local appearance, barring a flaw in the research, was in T. S. Elliott's "Family Reunion," at the King-Smith Playhouse, under the direction of Keinert Wolff.

And that not only reminds me, but arouses my curiosity. Would it be that "Harriet" finally has evenuated as a dramatization of Forrest (Bob) Wilson's prize-winning biography of Harriet Beecher Stowe, published under the title of "Crusader in Crinoline"? At the time the book came out, "Bob" and your reporter huddled numerously by long-distance and managed to catch the attention of a number of Broadway producers interested in a dramatization of the work, including the astute Mr. Miller. Miss Hayes at the time declined to commit herself to this interrogator until she had seen a script. That all seems to have come about—provided, of course, that this is the same story.

June Walker, one of Broadway's best known leading women, replaced Margalo Gillmore as Vinnie Day in "Life With Father" in Pittsburgh Monday night. Miss Walker is the third Vinnie to appear opposite Percy Waram in the touring company. Lillian Gish was the first. Mr. Waram has been portraying Father Day since February, 1940. Miss Gillmore, by the way, withdrew from the cast in accordance with an agreement signed at the outset of the tour to return to New York for more active pursuit of her duties as a member of the executive committee of both the British War Relief Society and the American Theater Wing.

When the late Wesley Eddy was guest conductor and master of ceremonies at Loew's Palace Theater—back about the turn of the '30's when stage shows were still being presented at the Palace and he held all the records for length of engagement—Wesley, jr., was a fragile little fellow of 6 or 7 years, always the shyest around the table at his mother's marvelous spaghetti suppers. Comes a note from Mrs. Eddy, dated New York, Jan. 11, in part as follows: "Just a line to say 'Hello' and a few things about my son, Wesley Eddy, jr. He's joined the Marines and leaves January 19 for Parris Island. I am going as far as Washington with him and will call you." Time marches on. And so do those husky lads who were "fragile little fellows" only yesterday—or day before.

Lieut. Don Craig, U. S. Army, former dramatic editor of the News, is weeking back in the old home town from San Antonio, Tex. Busman holidayed yesterday at the screening of "Life Begins at 8:30," emphatic in his insistence that whoever wrote that title was nuts!

Voice-Around-the-World Note

At last report, Pvt. Richard Livingston (Dick) Coe, this department's amputated right arm, had by-passed North Africa and was regaining his land legs in India. The boys sure get around!

Will Star in Tabloid Musical Comedy

JOY HODGES,

who will appear in the principal feminine role in the abbreviated version of George Abbott's "Best Foot Forward," famous Broadway hit, coming soon to the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater. Miss Hodges will be surrounded by a specially selected cast of comedians, singers and dancers

HEDDA HOPPER

An Ingenuous Jennifer

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 12.—Lunched yesterday with Jennifer Jones, who'll do "The Song of Bernadette." She's one of the most unspoiled, intelligent girls I've met in a long time. Her own story, since meeting David Selznick, is almost as miraculous as the miracle she'll play in the picture. Since Selznick signed her a year and a half ago for "Claudia" (which, incidentally, was directed by Rose Franken, who wrote the play), Jennifer, up until six weeks ago when she came here, spent nine hours a day going to dramatic lessons, taking English, dancing, posture—all of which Selznick paid for. And just as she was brought here for "Bernadette," her husband, Bob Walker, was signed by Metro, and the following day he went into "Bataan Patrol." She'd heard so much about Director Henry King that when she met him she couldn't say a word. She hasn't had time to meet people. She took a little house in Bel Air and didn't know until she read it in the papers that the place next door had been raided as a gambling house. Yes, I think you're going to like little Jennifer. I know I do.

NOEL COWARD

Romantic Ruminations

Harry Warner's losing his daughter, Ronie, in Tia Juana, Mexico. She'll marry Ned Garner, jeweler. Good luck, kids. . . . Philip Reed's renewing an old friendship with Helen Vinson, who's the house guest of Mrs. Douglas Churchill. Phil and Helen have been dancing at the Mocambo. In the meantime, Helen's reading scripts from two studios. . . . Just as Perc Westmore and Betty Hutton planned an elopement, his sinus interfered. . . . I'm wondering if Tora Evans will marry Gertrude Musgrove when her divorce from Vincent Korda is settled. She's playing with Katharine Cornell in New York. Their little boy is with his father. In the meantime, Vincent's gone back to England until divorce is over. . . . Noel Coward will be heading our way soon. . . . Funny mistake during "Air Force" preview in Glendale. By accident, they repeated the best scene twice. First time it got applause. The second time, giggles.

Friends returning from Governor Warren's inauguration tell me where five or six secretaries sat in the old days before the Olson regime, he had the Governor's office built into two tiers with a winding stairway to the upper one, and 35 employes were ensconsed there. At the inauguration, Olson wouldn't stand for Warren only for the Lieutenant Governor. Hear an order has been given to remove all dictaphones from all offices. Day after inauguration, Governor Warren went from the top to the bottom of the capitol, and greeted every one personally . . . Lew Ayres will soon be a lieutenant in the Medical Corps . . . Harpo Marx has a title for a new song: "Our Ancestors Came Over in Separate Boats, But We're All in the Same Boat Now."

Resents Reveille

Some are never satisfied. Charles Feldman worked overtime getting himself a Washington job without a uniform. Now he's working just as hard to get out of it. Doesn't like early hours in Washington. There he has to get up a 7 a. m., and our plush agent, when he was living on the top of the heap here, never moved until 10:30 a. m., when his butler knocked gently and brought in his breakfast tray . . . Jules Buck, our glamour photographer, back from the Aleutians, has some harrowing tales to tell. Said when making a trip in a Flying Fortress up there, the pilot turned around, and lo and behold, it was Jules' Hollywood attorn Jules has gone on to Camp Crowder.

Super-Sedans to Scooters

In the old days, out-of-town visitors always looked for the biggest, flashiest and plushiest motor cars. The size of your car was an indication of your standing and wealth and in that way they found the stars. Now they look for the smallest and if they look hard enough they'll see Jesse Lasky, Johnny Farrow, Burns and Allen, Ambassador Davies, June Havoc, Jack Benny, Red Skelton, Joan Davis, Jules Stein, Norman Taurrog, Archie Mayo, Alan Gordon and Alfred Hitchcock driving in cars slightly larger than cigar boxes . . . Latest Hollywood gag concerns Maj. Antole Litvak, who's one of our slowest directors. Story goes that Gen. Eisenhower is seven days behind schedule in Africa because Litvak is shooting the war!

Here and There

Altho Louise Rainer is going to be tested for the lead in "Hostages," Osa Massen has the inside track on the role and probably will get it . . . Brian Donlevy, who's done a succession of war pictures, tells me he wants to do a comedy next . . . Hair Stylist Freddie Fredericks of Factor's has a new color called citrus for Ginger Rogers' tresses in the dream sequence of "Lady in the Dark." Incidentally, I hear Don Loper's father gave Ginger her very first job . . . Where O where is Sam Wood? He was due back here days ago!

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Potpourri

New York, Jan. 12.

Brendan Bracken the British Minister of Information, recently wrote a special article for a London newspaper. The article was accepted, but the editors felt that it wasn't a timely one, and postponed its publication . . . Then came the day when the subject-matter in Bracken's article was deemed newsworthy, and the editors printed it . . . Bracken decided that the article was not for foreign consumption and should not be read outside the country. Brendan Bracken, in his role of Britain's censor, therefore censored the article written by Brendan Bracken, the author.

SONJA HENIE

Wendell Willkie has been invited to visit Australia, and may make that his next port of call . . . There's work at the Harvard Club—for the January issue of the club's Bulletin complains that 50 books are missing from the library, as well as 12 pages "neatly sliced from Esquire" . . . The R. A. F's. Gremlins will become swing fodder in Count Basie's new song, "Dance of the Gremlins," subcaptioned "There's a Gremlin in the Groove."

Orson Welles is reviving his plan to make a movie adaptation of "Mein Kampf," with Orson playing the role of Hitler . . . The Junior Air Reserve will hold its first convention, a three-day meeting, in Denver. Henry J. Kaiser will attend . . . Prof. Irwin Edman of Columbia University and Lin Yutang will write a joint book on philosophy. Dr. Lin will write the philosophy of the Orient, and Professor Edman the philosophy of the West . . . Sonja Henie drew more than $400,000 from her Chicago appearance . . . Mabel Dodge Luhan, whose literary salon was one of New York's best known, is recuperating from an operation at Mt. Sinai Hospital.

Edmond O'Brien, Deanna Durbin's leading man in her new picture, will report for Army service on the nineteenth . . . At a cocktail party for authors last week Ilka Chase posed with a group of book writers, who fidgeted, uneasily, while the cameraman tried to group them. "Let's pose with our backs turned to each other," Miss Chase suggested, "to make it look realistic" . . . Joe DiMaggio says he was misquoted in the stories published about his retirement . . . Henry Morgan, WOR's "Here's Morgan," will terminate his unique amusing radio show on January 15 for the duration. He enters the Army on that day.

Bing Crosby did some singing for the new Bob Hope picture, "They Got Me Covered." His voice will be heard coming from a music-box . . . The new Michael Todd hit musical, "Something for the Boys," has two of the youngest angels on Broadway. Michael Todd, jr., has $1500 invested in the show, and 9-year-old David Feitelson, jr., son of Todd's lawyer, has $1000 in it . . . Dr. Lin Yutang phoned his publisher, Bennett Cerf, to inquire about the reviews on his new book of Oriental wisdom. The eminent philosopher hemmed and hawed and then confessed: "What I really called you about was my daughters' wish to meet your wife's cousin—Ginger Rogers."

Frank Gervasi, who was Collier's correspondent in Africa, wrote an article about Darlan. It was in type, awaiting publication, when the news came of Darlan's assassination . . . Sergt. James Cannon's "The Sergeant Says," edited by Frank Sullivan and with a foreword by Paul Gallico, will be published on January 18. It promises to be The Soldier Book of the Year . . . The municipal radio station, WNYC, will memorialize the career of Nicholas Telsa, the famed scientist who died last week. Louis Adamic will preside at the broadcast, on Sunday . . . The mayor's proposed ban against the practice of selling pictures taken in night clubs will cut 50 per cent of the concessionaire's income.

Ann Nichols, who wrote "Abie's Irish Rose," saw Robert Benchley seated across the room, and sent a note to him: "America's Favorite Comedy (God Forbid)." This was a quotation from Benchley's review of the record-breaking play when he was the drama critic for the old Life magazine

Tested by Voice

Because radio broadcasting has made listeners familiar with the voices of prominent men throughout the world all actors in Warner Bros.' "Mission to Moscow" were voice-tested as well as screen-tested.

'Spring Again,' New Films Spark Theater Bills

"SPRING AGAIN." Grace George and C. Aubrey Smith, two highly respected veterans of the stage, arrive at the National Theater for one week to enact the breezy story of a wife's rebellion against her husband's penchant for dedicating monuments to his father's memory. The play is by Isabel Leighton and Bertram Block, and was staged by Guthrie McClintic. Opens Monday.

Earle

"ROAD TO MOROCCO." Blithely swinging along another well-beaten track come the irrepressible pair, Bob Hope and Bing Crosby, to throw more chaos into North Africa than the United Nations could possibly cause. Dorothy Lamour is thrown in for good measure to add to the scenic grandeur of the Mediterranean country. Hillbilly ditties and barnyard imitations are the forte of Rufe Davis, who headlines the new stage show. Opens Friday.

Capitol

"LIFE BEGINS AT 8:30." Specifically for Ida Lupino and Monty Wooley, who are seen as a declining actor and his lame daughter. His addiction to liquor is the cause of his dropping from public favor, whilst his daughter retains illusions of his past greatness. Another top-notch band is the stage attraction of the week; this time Xavier Cugat and his Latin-American rhythms. Opens Thursday.

RKO-Keith's

"ONCE UPON A HONEYMOON." Through the occupied countries of Europe; with Cary Grant and Ginger Rogers always one step ahead of the German Gestapo. Walter Slezak, Albert Basserman and Albert Dekker are the supporting players. Held over.

the achievement of THOSE WHO WORK "BEHIND THE LINES"

The patriotic zeal of the men and women workers of Acme is symbolized by the Army-Navy "E" awarded for outstanding achievement in the production of war materials. Acme workers share with all Americans a stirring pride in the valorous action of our boys on the fighting fronts. Here at Acme we fully realize that the future of our families, our homes, our country depends upon the boys at the front and our ability to give them the weapons and equipment they must have. Among them are our husbands, brothers, sons. We will not let them down!

We are proud of the "E" Emblem on our lapels, as a decoration for past production achievements. We accept it as a compelling challenge to even greater production in the days that lie before us.

TO AMERICA'S FIRST PLANE SPOTTER

We don't know who you were.

But the night you went on duty marked the end of the world, as most Americans had always known it.

You were a symbol of the realization that oceans are merely hours across by air. You were an admission that the barriers of land and water had been lifted. You were our first bow to the new global geography where distance is reckoned by the skyways as well as by nautical miles.

New York is closer to Moscow, by plane, than it is to our South American neighbor, Buenos Aires.

We are fighting the war today on that new global geography. We're fighting for remote pin-point islands in the Pacific because they can be potent air bases. We're fighting in the Aleutian fogs because from Kiska a bomber could strike at Detroit almost as easily as at San Diego.

The sea route from New York to Bombay is about 9400 miles. It is a 3-week voyage.

Today's skyway route from New York to Bombay by plane is about 7790 miles. Flying time: 39 hours.

There is no need to labor the point that this is an air-minded war. The newspaper headlines never let you forget it. And as you read them, remember that we must remain equally air-minded in victory.

The countries of this new, sky-linked world will be bound together more closely, geographically and physically, than our own states were at the turn of the century. Today, wherever you may live, no spot on the once-wide globe is farther than 60 hours away from your local airport.

| FROM | TO | SURFACE TIME | | AIR TIME | |
| New York | Chungking, China | 11,300 M | 31 days | 7500 M | 38 hrs. |
| New York | Moscow, Russia | 5700 M | 8 days | 4525 M | 23 hrs. |
| New York | London, England | 3700 M | 5 days | 3462 M | 17 hrs. |
| San Francisco | Brisbane, Australia | 8200 M | 21 days | 7050 M | 35 hrs. |
| Chicago | Fairbanks, Alaska | 4090 M | 8 days | 2730 M | 14 hrs. |

Approximate traveling time and distances as you have known them in the past and as you will know them in the Air Age.

Realization of how the plane has shrunk our world is vital to straight thinking about the kind of peace that can last. With this new conception of global geography, you see the world as it is—a clustering of nations whose nearness makes them inter-dependent and inter-related.

Without this new conception, you are looking at a world that used to be—a world where nations lived in the safety of remoteness, protected by distances that no longer exist and seas that have been narrowed to mill ponds.

But understanding alone isn't enough. If the global community is to live together in freedom and enduring peace after the war, the nations which deeply believe in freedom and peace must possess air supremacy.

To bring this supremacy about, first in war and then in peace, is the aim of the tens of thousands of men and women who make up America's aircraft industry.

QUICK FACTS FOR AIR-MINDED READERS

In 1929, Consolidated was already building America's biggest planes. The company is 20 years old this year.

Today Consolidated is building the B-24 Liberator, (4-engine, long-range, land-based bomber)—PB2Y Coronado patrol bomber, (4-engine long-range flying boat)—PBY Catalina patrol bomber, (twin-motored, long-range flying boat)—the C-87 Liberator Transport, (cargo-plane version of the Liberator bomber).

Consolidated was one of the first aircraft manufacturers to establish a training school for Army Air Forces mechanics and ground crew. "Camp Consair"—complete with barracks, officers' quarters, mess halls, laboratories, classroom buildings, and hospital—adjoins the Consolidated plant at San Diego.

In Fort Worth, Texas, where nothing but grazing land stood a year and a half ago, one of the world's longest aircraft assembly lines is now delivering a steady flow of 28-ton C-87 Liberator Transports. These planes are daily spanning both oceans with military supplies and personnel for our global fighting fronts.

Winston Churchill used a Liberator for his flight to Moscow. General H. H. Arnold flew in a Liberator from Brisbane, Australia, to San Francisco in the record time of 35 hours and 53 minutes.

It was a Consolidated Liberator, dubbed the "Gulliver," which carried Wendell Willkie on his round-the-world flight. The "Gulliver" was the first plane in history to span Siberia and cut across the Gobi Desert and Mongolia, the first to fly from China to the U.S. via Alaska. The 31,000-mile route blazed by this Liberator will probably become one of the regular skyways of post-war aerial travel and commerce.

Ford and North American are also building the Consolidated-designed B-24 Liberators. Similarly, in Canada, Boeing and Vickers are building the Consolidated Catalina patrol bomber.

Turning out great numbers of long-range bombers like the Liberator, is Consolidated's major wartime job. But we are not doing this job single-handed. More than 2000 sub-contractors and suppliers, in many parts of the U. S., are working round the clock to provide many of the materials and parts for this giant bomber.

WPB Transfers To Work in Food Units

War Production Board employes being transferred to Agriculture will be assigned to either the Food Production or Food Distribution units. To Food Production will go the fertilizer unit and parts of the farm machinery and equipment, containers section, food technology and textile and clothing branch of Civilian Supply that is concerned with plans, programs and requirements. Food production is under Herbert Parisius. To Roy Henderson's Food Distribution will go the food division, fats and oils, food processing machinery and the remaining parts of farm machinery, containers and the food division of the Office of Civilian Supply. Meantime, the sweeping reorganization of the department has been called off for the time being. A revamping will take place, but it won't be as all-inclusive as planned.

Why classification people get grey hairs: A $5600 official of War Production Board made a request to have an assistant in his office reallocated to a better job. A classification analyst went to his office to check up on the duties of the assistant and to determine whether the reallocation was justified. He was met with a barrage of questions: "What are you doing in my office? What business is it of yours and the like." The official finally put the clincher on the interview with this blast: "I'm a grade 13. I make $5600 a year and I refuse to talk with anyone beneath my grade." That guy will find it difficult to get along in Government where the average salary is $2100.

War Labor Board faces a shakeup. Its administrative machinery will be revamped and decentralized to insure speedier action on wage cases. Budget Bureau has been called in on the job. The decentralization will mean fewer employes will be hired here. In fact, some already hired will be sent to field offices where most of the cases will be decided. WLB now has about 1000 employes and hundreds more will be hired. . . . The 1944 budget knocked out 422 employes at the Civil Service Commission who had been hired to make the Ramspeck Act of 1940 effective. Incidentally, Federal agencies recommended only 80,000 for status under the act. More than 2800 of that number were attorneys. An estimated 30,000 to 40,000 employes are now "frozen" in their jobs. These employes were eligible for Civil Service status under the act, but their agencies failed to recommend them. Now they can't be promoted or transferred to permanent Civil Service jobs. But they can be promoted to "war service" jobs.

Note to Civil Service: Now what's holding up the transfer order? For the good of the service the new rules and regulations that were drafted weeks ago to govern the transfer of Federal workers should be speedily issued. Transfers are now bound by red tape and general misunderstanding. No two people seem to agree on how or why transfers should be made. The rules on prejudiced resignations and the 90-day wait rule between jobs are interpreted differently by just about everyone. Employes are told one story in their agencies and another at the commission and if they visit the commission a second time and see a different person they are likely to be told a still different story. That's not the way to get employes transferred.

Yesterday, for example, the commission issued a list of critical jobs for which it begged employes to apply who are working below their skills. It's a good idea but the commission lacks follow through. Too many employes who did apply were befuddled by it all.

Simple and uniform transfer rules are urgently needed, rules so simple that everyone can understand them . . . The commission this week is expected to issue its "brake" on promotions. The plan provides that no person who has served for six months or less can be raised more than $300 or that no person who has served less than a year can be promoted more than $600 in salary without prior approval of the commission.

Interior Department has adopted a new form of individual interviews called "probational interviews." New employes are called in after they've been on the job for 30 days for a check on how they're doing. Interior doesn't wait for dissatisfied employes to resign. It catches them before they reach that frame of mind. The department has discovered many new employes to be working at jobs below their skills and it places them in better jobs. Housing and transportation are worked out for the employes. It is a good service that other agencies would do well to investigate.

19 D. C. Youths to Be Graduated From West Point on Jan. 19

The sons of two generals are among 19 Washington young men who will be graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point next Tuesday. All will be commissioned second lieutenants.

Commencement exercises and the presentation of commissions to the 410 cadets in the class will be staged in the field house of the academy at 10:30 a. m., preceded by baccalaurate service and the superintendent's reception on Sunday and the graduation dress parade on Monday. Silver wings of full-fledged pilots will be awarded to 165 cadets.

Because of the war, the exercises will be streamlined. Originally scheduled for late May or early June, graduation of the new class of "future generals" was advanced 4½ months under West Point's new three-year course. Academic work for the first class will continue until five days before the ceremonies. Maj. Gen. Francis B. Wilby, superintendent, announced that there will be no class reunion or alumni exercises.

Those scheduled for graduation from the Capital are:

Ernest D. Scott, jr., son of Gen. and Mrs. Ernest D. Scott, of 3549 Springland Lane Northwest, a graduate of the Staunton Military Academy of Staunton. Scott attended Millard's preparatory school for one year prior to receiving his appointment from Senator Worth D. Clark of Idaho. During his first class year he was made a cadet sergeant. He was president of the Dialetic Society and a member of the ring committee. Upon graduation Scott will receive his commission in the Air Corps, with pilot's wings.

James E. H. Rumbough, son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. W. S. Rumbough, of The Kennedy-Warren. Rumbough is a graduate of the St. Alban's High School and attended Millard's preparatory school for one year before coming to West Point. During his first class year he was a cadet supply sergeant. He expects commission in Infantry.

Milton E. Stevens, son of Capt. and Mrs. William J. Stevens, 5129 Eighth Street Northwest. Stevens attended Roosevelt High School, Columbian Preparatory School and Sullivan's West Point Preparatory School. While at the academy, he attained the rank of cadet lieutenant. Stevens was a member of the boxing team and fishing club. When graduated, he will be commissioned in the Corps of Engineers.

John L. Weber, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Weber of 5921 Thirty-third Street Northwest. Appointed to West Point by Representative Eaton of New Jersey, Weber graduated from New Brunswick (N. J.) High School in 1936 and later attended the West Point Preparatory School at Fort Dix, N. J. He expects to be commissioned in the Air Corps upon graduation, with pilot's wings.

George K. Maertens, son of Col. and Mrs. K. Maertens of the Woodley Park Towers. A graduate of the Thomas Jefferson High School at San Antonio, Tex., Maertens attended Millard's Preparatory School for one year prior to receiving his appointment to West Point from Representative Leavy of Texas. During his first class year he attained the rank of cadet lieutenant. He participated in tennis and football, and was a member of the choir while there. Upon graduation he will be commissioned in the Infantry branch of the service.

James W. Freeman, jr., son of Col. and Mrs. James W. Freeman of 1542 Forty-fourth Street Northwest. A graduate of the North High School, Omaha, Nebr., Freeman attended Doane College for one year prior to receiving his appointment to West Point from Representative Simpson of Pennsylvania. During his first class year he attained the rank of cadet lieutenant. He participated in wrestling and soccer and was a member of the ring committee and the Dialectic Society. Upon graduation, he will be commissioned in the Infantry branch of the service.

Darrie H. Richards, son of Col. and Mrs. George J. Richards of 3061 Connecticut Avenue Northwest. Graduating from the Woodrow Wilson High School, Richards attended the Brown University of Providence, R. I., for two years, prior to receiving his appointment to West Point from Representative Walter of Pennsylvania. During his first-class year he attained the rank of cadet lieutenant. Richards was a member of the Dialectic Society, Choir, Ski Club and a chapel usher. When graduated, he will receive his commission in the Air Corps, with pilot's wings.

Charles A. Wirt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin B. Wirt of 3142 Quesada Street Northwest. Graduating from the Hume Fogg High School of Nashville, Tenn., Wirt attended the Vanderbilt University for one year and prepared for his entrance examinations to West Point at the Marion Military Institute, Marion, Ala., for one year, prior to receiving his appointment through a competitive examination given while he was a member of the Regular Army. During his first-class year he was made a cadet sergeant. He was interested in sports, turning out for soccer and lacrosse and winning numerals and monogram in the latter sport. He also was a member of the Ski Club. Upon graduation, he will receive his commission in the Infantry.

Henry B. Sayler, son of Col. and Mrs. H. B. Sayler, of 4701 Connecticut Avenue. Appointed to West Point by the late Representative Griswold of Indiana, he attended St. James School in Hagerstown, Md., and the Millard Prep School in Washington. A lieutenant in the Corps of Cadets, Sayler was active in polo, soccer and wrestling and was a member of the Dialectic Society, Glee Club and Debating Society at West Point. He expects to be commissioned in the Air Corps with pilot's wings.

John K. Eckert, son of Col. and Mrs. John P. Eckert, of 220 Whittier Street Northwest, a graduate of Western High School. Eckert attended Millard's Preparatory School for one year prior to receiving a Presidential appointment. During his second class year, he was a cadet corporal. Eckert was a member of the Camera Club, debating club and radio club. Upon graduation, he will be commissioned in the Air Corps, with pilot's wings.

George L. Danforth, jr., son of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. G. L. Danforth, of 3349 Tennyson Street. A graduate of the Leavenworth (Kans.) High School, Danforth attended the Stanton Preparatory School at Cornwall-on-Hudson, New York, for one year prior to winning his appointment in a competitive examination given while he was a member of the National Guard of New York. He participated in wrestling, winning a monogram in that sport. He was also member of the chess club and ski club. Upon graduation, he will be commissioned in the Air Corps, with pilot's wings.

Ernest C. Raulin, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Raulin, jr., of 1128 Morse Street Northeast. A graduate of McKinley High School, Raulin attended the Devitt Preparatory School and the Millard Army Preparatory School for two years before receiving his appointment. During his first class year here he was a cadet sergeant. He was interested in sports, participating in football, track and lacrosse, and winning numerals in football. He was also a member of the choir for four years. Upon graduation, he will be commissioned in the Signal Corps.

Mitchel Goldenthal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wolf Goldenthal, of 1113 I Street Northwest. Appointed to West Point from the National Guard, Goldenthal graduated from Central High School in 1938 and later attended Wilson Teachers College for a year. A sergeant in the Corps of Cadets, he was active in football and soccer and was a member of the Ring Committee, Debating Society, Fishing Club and Gift Committee. He expects to be commissioned in the Corps of Engineers upon graduation.

John W. Armstrong, son of Col. and Mrs. Richard N. Armstrong, of 4345 Wisconsin Avenue. Armstrong graduated from Staunton (Va.) Military Academy in 1937 and later attended the West Point Preparatory School at Fort Dix, N. J., for a year. A lieutenant in the Corps of Cadets, he was active in football at West Point and was a member of the Chess Club. He expects to be commissioned in the Infantry upon graduation.

Francis H. Bonham, son of Mrs. F. G. Bonham, of 2129 Florida Avenue Northwest. Graduating from the Western High School, Bonham attended Millard's Preparatory School for one year prior to receiving a Presidential appointment. He was interested in sports, participating in tennis, cross country, and track, and winning numerals in tennis, monogram in cross country and a monogram and major "A" in track. He was also class president, a hop manager and an academic coach. When graduated, he will receive his commission in the Air Corps, with pilot's wings.

Richard T. Batson, son of Col. and Mrs. R. C. Batson, of 3130 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest. A graduate of the Baltimore Polytechnic Institute, Batson received his appointment to West Point from Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi. During his first class year he attained the high rank of cadet captain. He participated in hockey and was a member of the chess club and of the honor committee and council. Upon graduation, he will be commissioned in the Engineer Corps. His academic rating while at West Point was extremely high and he will graduate approximately No. 2 in his class.

Adrian St. John, son of Col. Adrian St. John. A graduate of the Balboa High School, St. John attended the Millard's Preparatory School for one year prior to receiving his appointment. During his first class year here, he attained the rank of cadet lieutenant. While there he was a hop manager, a member of the water carnival committee, gift committee and of the squash club. Upon being graduated, he will be commissioned in the Cavalry.

Stephen O. Benner, son of Col. and Mrs. Ralph C. Benner, of 3431 Porter Street Northwest, formerly of McArthur, Ohio. Appointed to West Point, he graduated from Bel Air (Md.) High School and later attended the Millard Prep School in Washington. A sergeant in the Corps of Cadets, he expects to be commissioned in the Air Corps upon graduation, with pilot's wings.

John G. Hoyt, son of Maj. Leon W. Hoyt, of 3100 Connecticut Avenue Northwest. A graduate of the Woodrow Wilson High School, Hoyt attended the Willard Preparatory School for one year prior to receiving his appointment. During his first class year, he was made a cadet sergeant. He participated in tennis and soccer, winning letters and a Navy Star in both sports. He was also a member of the Camera Club. When graduated, he will be commissioned in the Signal Corps.

James M. Smith Denied Reopening Of Murder Case

Justice James M. Proctor of the District Court yesterday refused to reopen the murder case for which James Matthew Smith, 43, Negro, is serving a life term in prison.

Smith was convicted of killing Mrs. Florence Dancy, 65, Negro, in April, 1935. Jarvis Catoe, 35, Negro, arrested in 1941, confessed to seven murders here including that of Mrs. Dancy. The court then permitted Smith to ask for a new trial, invoking the ancient and seldom used writ of coram nobis.

However, last week, Catoe repudiated his confessions and testified that they were false. He is scheduled to be electrocuted Friday for the murder of Mrs. Rose Abramowitz in March, 1941.

Dealers Here Must Share Fuel Oil Now

New Order Puts Secondary Suppliers Under Control Of Ickes' Office

With Washington's fuel oil situation getting more acute, the Petroleum Administration for War has been given the power to control "secondary suppliers" in the distribution of oil, it was learned yesterday.

The new order, which goes into effect immediately, is expected to alleviate somewhat the plight of local fuel-oil dealers, many of whom reported yesterday that they were completely out of oil with the exception of the small amounts now in trucks that were being held for emergency."

PAW, which previously controlled only primary suppliers, now has the authority to allocate oil from dealers who have ample supply on hand to others who are without and have orders to fill.

What steps will be taken will be known today, when PAW will issue its statement covering the new order.

One dealer having sufficient oil to supply consumer needs was the L. P. Steuart & Bros. Corp. Curtis Steuart, manager of the firm, said: "We saw this fuel oil situation coming way back in 1940, and we provided for it by storage. Just before the present crisis here, we received a trainload of oil from Texas at our yards."

Asked if he would supply other dealers who were without oil, Steuart replied that he was not a supplier, but a dealer, and he would only provide for his consumers.

He added, however, that his company had already helped out a large hotel and two embassies that were without fuel oil.

Meanwhile, the arrival of an overdue oil barge from Curtis Bay, Baltimore, was awaited anxiously by other dealers. However, as one dealer pointed out: "We've been waiting for this barge for more than a week and it's getting to be quite a joke. We were told it would be here before. Now we are told from Baltimore that it's due in today. In the meantime we are sitting around doing nothing, waiting for this barge. Happily, we haven't been swamped with calls from consumers."

Children's Hospital, having only enough fuel oil for today, is among many buildings which will be out of heat if the barge doesn't arrive on schedule.

An official said yesterday that he hoped the hospital's needs would be supplied today. In the meantime, he said, "I'm hoping and praying that we get the oil."

At Brentwood Village, where 150 apartments were without heat Monday, William J. David, manager of the Northeast apartment development, said he feared the situation would get "worse."

David pointed out that he was forced to use a No. 2 residential oil because the No. 6 heavy industrial oil, which is normally used, was unobtainable. The No. 2, a lighter oil, was used in desperation, he said, adding that his boilers might break down under the use of a fuel for which they were not designed.

City News In Brief

James D. Fairfax, 45, of 2208 F Street Northwest, was struck by an automobile last night at Sixth and H Streets Northwest and taken to Casualty Hospital where his condition was described as critical. Police said the car was driven by Edward A. Geis, 55, of 76 T Street Northwest. The driver was not held.

Fairfax suffered possible fractured skull and ribs and abrasions and contusions of the face and forehead.

The Rubber Crisis

Add droll incidents in our enchanting town or have you seen that strange-looking thing hanging from a window in the New Municipal Center?

Before it was put out itself, it drove Rubber Czar William M. Jeffers out of his fifth-floor office.

Like many other things hereabout it smells.

The object is a rubber overshoe, designed for use on tires worn slick. A sample was sent to Jeffers. It remained two days in his office. He, it was reported, then decamped. Clerks carried it about from office to office, then hung it out the window on a 4-foot rope. It's made of thiokol, and its practicality is being studied.

Key Anniversary

The one-hundredth anniversary of the death of Francis Scott Key, author of the Star-Spangled Banner, was commemorated yesterday in a memorial resolution by Senators Radcliffe and Tydings of Maryland.

They described him as a "Christian gentleman, devout citizen and noble character" who serves "as an example today."

Key, a son of John Ross Key and Anne Phoebe Penn Dagworthy Charlton Key, was born on August 1, 1779, at Terra Rubra, now a part of Carroll County, Md.

New Auxiliary Police Group Asks Clarification of Status

Organization of a city-wide auxiliary police association to plan policy for the city's police aides was carried out last night at a meeting of 60 members of the force, representing every precinct and the 3500 auxiliaries in the District.

First act of the charter members was a resolution requesting clarification of the District Commissioners' statements regarding their status. Spokesmen for the auxiliary force said that statements made more confusing than the original confusing order for the auxiliaries to act only during blackouts."

Another resolution committed the association to a firm stand behind the nine auxiliary police inspectors, stripped of their authority by last week's order.

A third resolution expressed complete confidence in Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, and in Inspector Harvey Callahan, assistant superintendent.

Sentiment of auxiliaries who took the floor was that even if their past actions as police officers with authority to arrest were illegal, every District official, "including especially the District Commissioners," had praised the auxiliaries and their established value in police work.

The next meeting, to establish a permanent city-wide organization has been set tentively for early next week. Spokesmen for some precinct auxiliary associations said they expected their entire membership to be enrolled in the new city organization.

Melvin B. Foer, auxiliary private from Precinct No. 1, was named temporary chairman. He appointed a committee of 16 members under Auxiliary Detective Sergt. Arthur Markel to formulate policy and invite civic leaders to attend a mass meeting which the association will call.

Earlier in the day eight former auxiliary police inspectors met with Senator Pat McCarran, chairman of the Senate Disrtict Committee and charged that they had been "hoodwinked" by the Commissioners.

Senator McCarran urged the men to await a meeting with the Commissioners before resigning from the auxiliary force, and said:

"Bring your better manhood and patriotism to the front."

After a very heated session, the men said they would not hand in their resignations immediately, but would await developments.

At the hearing they said that in July Police Chief Edward J. Kelly had requested a ruling from the Commissioners on the status of the auxiliary police, and that this ruling was not made public until Saturday, although it had been available since July.

For the past six months, they said, the Commissioners had permitted them to make arrests and perform other functions of regular members of the police force despite the fact that by arresting persons they were making themselves liable to civil suits for false arrests.

In Saturday's announcement, the Commissioners stated that the auxiliary police had no powers of arrests, were to be used only in blackouts or air raids and could hold no rank above that of captain.

They told the Senator that for the past month they had made repeated efforts to see the Commissioners but were never granted an appointment. Finally, they said, they wrote a letter offending the Commissioners, who "threw us out."

Restrictions on Auxiliaries Praised and Assailed by Police

Mixed reactions were apparent at police headquarters yesterday to the Commissioners' order limiting the activities of the auxiliary police to air-raid duties.

Privates, sergeants and a few lieutenants did not pull their punches in assailing the action. Commanding officers, captains and higher ranking men appeared to be pleased—not so much by the fact they lost considerable manpower, but because the status of the volunteer patrolmen was clarified.

One official explained that the move was one of the two alternatives thrown at the Commissioners by the auxiliary force in the past few months.

"It is generally agreed," the official declared, "that the auxiliaries had demanded that they either be given full authority with Metropolitan Police, be fully provided with firearms, and be assured adequate physical and financial assistance in the event of injury or be used only during air raids and blackouts."

No Legal Justification

The official said that it was impossible to obtain firearms for the auxiliaries and insisted that training them was also virtually impossible.

"The act of Congress," he asserted, "says definitely that the Commissioners are empowered to designate special policemen to serve without compensation during blackouts and air raids. To allow these men to patrol and function as regular officers would be in direct violation of the act.

"Since the auxiliaries were established, they have built a strong organization and because of the good they have done, were called upon for more and more responsible tasks. They were never intended for this purpose and it was just a question of time before the city would have been involved in a terrific liability action.

"They have done a splendid job, but until proper law is obtained to justify their use and protect the Police Department and the city, I am glad of the Commissioner's action."

The opinion of the official, however, was not reflected by lower ranks in the Police Department.

A poll of the noncommissioned personnel brought the response: "Why were the auxiliaries allowed so much leeway and so much dependence placed on them, if their heads were to be chopped off?"

"It's not fair to the men who have put in long hours away from businesses and families," declared a police private who was in charge of his precinct's auxiliary force.

"The men thought they were doing the city a service. Now it appears the city resented their helpfulness and disposed of them without an adequate explanation. I think the entire auxiliary program will collapse because of the action."

Almost every policeman questioned was outspoken against the Commissioners. The general opinion was that the municipal leaders were fearful of the growing strength of the 3500-man auxiliary group and squelched them before embarrassing repercussions were felt.

AirCadet McGinnis Pays Crash Call Near Own Home

Aviation Cadet Henry A. McGinnis, jr., 21, 515 West Great Falls Street, East Falls Church, Va., paid an unexpected visit to his home neighborhood yesterday.

Fortunately, it ended up not too badly for everybody concerned, excluding the Navy, which owned the plane he was flying.

Cadet McGinnis failed to come out of a dive while on a routine training flight from the naval air base at Anacostia. His ship struck a couple of trees near the home of Mrs. Mary F. O'Connor, plowed into her yard and finally came to rest against the O'Connor house, which is almost across the street from where McGinnis lives.

The young pilot was taken to the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, where his condition was reported as not serious. He was able to climb out of the plane, which Fairfax police said was badly damaged.

C.I.O. Asks Return to Old Fares, Citing Big Transit Income Rise

A return to the old streetcar fares of four tokens for 30 cents and the $1 weekly pass was petitioned of the Public Utilities Commission yesterday by the regional CIO council, as the commission closed a hearing on the Federation of Citizens Associations petition for three for a quarter tokens.

Citing a 441-per cent increase in the transit company's net income since 1936, the CIO wrote that the public interest would "warrant a complete and thoroughgoing reexamination of the basic structure of streetcar and bus fares in the District of Columbia and all the factors which go into the make-up of this fare."

Even Greater Reduction

"The results of this study and public hearing might warrant even a greater reduction in fare," the petition continued.

The commission took the matter of the three for a quarter tokens under consideration after an all-day hearing marked by the efforts of the Citizens' Association to divert the leading issue from discrimination to the matter of convenience and necessity.

PUC Counsel Lloyd Harrison told the commission, however, that convenience and necessity were not factors in rate making but only in establishment and maintenance of service.

Only Issue, Contention

The Capital Transit counsels argued that discrimination was the only issue involved, and that if the commission found the six for 50 cents tokens unjustly discriminatory its only course would be to eliminate the entire token item from the rate structure.

A. D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, denounced the entire hearing as being a "silly waste of time for the public and the PUC."

Driving Ban Lands 62 In Difficulty

Total of 257 Here Now Stand Accused Of Using Their Cars Without Necessity

The addition yesterday of 62 motorists to the list of alleged violators of the pleasure driving ban brought to 257 the number recorded in Washington since the restrictions went into effect last Thursday.

The local OPA office reported 57 of the additions while District police reported the other five.

The date for the first hearings has not been set. OPA officials said that would be up to the local rationing boards.

Although police and OPA inspectors were still listing license numbers, there was every indication that the public was complying almost 100 per cent with the ban.

A survey of the Eastern States and the District by the American Automobile Association revealed that there was almost complete compliance. It was found, however, that the ban had forced the closing of many businesses on roadways along the Atlantic Seaboard. in many restaurants, night clubs and places of amusement, they said, business had decreased from 60 to 80 per cent.

Meanwhile, Whitney Leary, District OPA director, warned motorists whose cars are registered in other States and operating here on gas rations received in Washington would be subject to the same enforcement as local car owners.

The warning came after Leary's office had been informed that vehicles registered out of town, but included in the District ration lists, had been violating the pleasure driving ban.

District OPA officials, swamped with calls as to what constitutes pleasure driving, revealed yesterday that the ban didn't necessarily mean that a person may not stop on his way home from work for a few hours of pleasure.

The only stipulation made, however, was that the stop for social purposes must not take the person off his customary route, thus entailing greater use of gasoline.

District Bar Pays Tribute To Rutledge

Justice Wiley B. Rutledge, nominated Monday for the United States Supreme Court, was an unexpected speaker at the meeting of the District Bar Association at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

Characteristic of the former dean of the University of Iowa Law School and at present associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals here, Justice Rutledge remarks were brief. He was introduced by Bar President Paul B. Cromelin, who said he knew of no man better qualified for the Supreme bench.

Justice Rutledge, visibly moved, said his heart was full over the tributes of friends and press since his nomination, "but here, among friends, I can tell you that I feel in this nomination more than my just deserts."

Court of Appeals Night

The meeting was designated as "U. S. Court of Appeals Night" and guests of honor were Justices Justin Miller, Justin Edgerton, Fred M. Vinson, Harold M. Stephens and Justice Rutledge.

Justice Vinson spoke on the difference between the law of the United States and that of the new Germany—Nazi law, referring specifically to an amendment to the German penal code of 1935, which directs that "if no definite law shall be applied to an illegal act, the prisoner shall be punished under a law whose fundamentals principally concur most closely with the act."

Another Contrast

The justice also compared our price administration laws with those of Nazi-occupied Norway. There a person is entitled to appeal a conviction for violation of a price fixing or rationing law only if he has been "sentenced to unconditional imprisonment, loss of trading rights for three months or fined more than 100,000 kroner"—and then only if the price advisorate gives its consent.

Judge Vinson drew a round of laughter when he said that in Germany there were no unwritten laws, "as in Maryland, especially the Eastern Shore, where a lawyer who losses a case has the right to cuss the court for 72 hours."

The association concluded the meeting with a demonstration of "How to Argue a Case Before the United States Court of Appeals." Justices Miller and Edgerton and Attorneys Ross O'Donoghue, Lyle F. O'Rourke and Charles E. Smoot were the demonstrators.

Cady's Assailant Sought

Franco's Objection May Toll Bell on New Film

SOME of the most significant political maneuvering ever seen by seasoned diplomats is going on backstage regarding the filming of Ernest Hemingway's famous book, "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

Strenuous objections have been voiced to Paramount by the Franco Fascist government through its ambassador, Don Juan Francisco de Cardenas, and it now seems probable that the film will never reach the American public.

The book is the story of the civil war in Spain, the struggle between the Loyalist government and the Fascist revolutionaries supported by Hitler and Mussolini, which many people believe was the prelude to the current war. However, Sam Wood, the producer for Paramount, has left out all politics.

"'Gone With the Wind' was a hot love story," says Wood, who worked on that film, "and 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' is an even hotter love story."

But even though the Paramount version emphasizes love and leaves out politics, General Franco doesn't like it. Paramount has already invested more than two million dollars in it. Gary Cooper is playing the star role. But General Franco says no.

Inside reason why he says no is briefly this: Showing of the film will promote the sale of Hemingway's book. And though the film shuns politics, the book decidedly doesn't. So Franco envisages sale of the book all over the world.

Nobody ever dreamed that Franco's hand was that strong inside the U. S. A. But the State Department is for him; also the Rockefeller Committee is not enthusiastic about the picture's release. But most important of all, the Vatican's disapproval is the real reason why "For Whom the Bell Tolls" will probably not be shown.

'Sistie' Launches a Ship

The optimistic note in the President's message to Congress has also been reflected in his manner recently. Before going on the floor of the House to deliver his message, the President spent several minutes chatting gaily with Congressional leaders and spinning a yarn for the especial benefit of Senate Republican Leader Charles McNary of Oregon. Henry Kaiser is turning out Liberty ships at such a phenomenal rate in Oregon yards, the President told McNary, that his little granddaughter, "Sistie" Boettiger, of Seattle, Wash., is comparing Kaiser to Superman.

It seems that "Sistie" ("She's getting to be a pretty big girl now," said the President was invited by Kaiser to christen a ship at one of the Oregon yards. She was given a bottle of champagne and told to stand near the ways.

"But where's the ship, Sistie asked, according to her grandfather.

"Just start swinging that bottle," Kaiser instructed her. "By the time you bring it down, a ship will be there."

Hitler's Stooges

They aren't advertising it, but there is one excellent reason why isolationist Senators Wheeler of Montana and Nye of North Dakota are working so feverishly for an investigation of the Justice Department and its prosecution of Hitler stooges in the U. S. A.

That reason is that they know some of the dynamite-laden evidence now before the Justice Department which is sure to come out when those cases go to trial. That evidence shows the two Senators as having been used by the Nazi sympathizers and alleged seditionists.

Probably the two Senators did not know they were being used. Wheeler, at one time, told friends he was worried over definite Nazi influences inside the America First Committee and that he had worked inside it to keep those influences down.

However, the fact remains that Frank K. Ferenz, one of those indicted for sedition, organized the American First rally for Wheeler when he arrived in Los Angeles and was one of Wheeler's active supporters. Ferenz, according to evidence before the Justice Department, had a sister in Germany who wrote him advice regarding a job for der Fuehrer.

Senator Nye, in turn, has lent his frank to the Steuben Society, for which the Steuben Society was fined by the Post Office Department. He has also been active behind-the-scenes in aiding the appeal of George Sylvester Viereck, already convicted for failure to register as a foreign agent and now indicted for sedition.

At any rate, all of these facts and more are expected to come out when the sedition-propaganda cases go to trial. Obviously, therefore, it is good strategy on the part of the two Senators involved to attack the Justice Department in advance. Then when the evidence is brought out they can charge persecution and a smear campaign.

Troops Guard Congress

NEWS PHOTOGRAPHERS were herding the 75 rookie Congressmen up the stone steps of the Capitol for a group picture when they got an unexpected taste of military discipline. A soldier suddenly stepped in front of them.

"I'm sorry, but you can't go up there," he announced.

"We're members of Congress," spoke up several freshmen.

"I don't care who you are," replied the soldier, fixing his bayonet. "You can't go up these steps. Those are my orders."

And that was that until someone located a lieutenant, who rescinded the order and permitted the group picture to be made on the steps.

Martin vs. Rayburn

PRIVATELY Republican Leader Joe Martin never had any intention of letting the Republicans organize Congress and elect him as Speaker. Until 1944, this responsibility is the last thing he wants.

However, the canny Republican leader took keen delight in keeping the opposition guessing and carried on his little joke until the very last.

When he marched into Speaker Rayburn's office with the committee that was to escort Rayburn to the floor, following his reelection, Martin was grinning from ear to ear.

"Sam," he said, "I've got some bad news for you. I hope you can hold up under the shock. You've been reelected Speaker."

Bicycle Rationing Relaxed in East On Gas Shortage

Bicycle rationing was liberalized in the East yesterday because of the gasoline shortage.

New bicycles formerly could not be purchased except by persons in essential occupations who had no car and could show a definite need for a bike.

A new order yesterday permits ration boards to authorize bicycle purchases in the East by anyone, regardless of occupation, who needs it to go to work or to perform his job.

In the rest of the country students were added to the list of eligible purchasers, and ownership of an automobile will no longer prevent a person from getting a ration certificate for a new bike.

Blood Donated For Soldiers By 63 Reservists

Sixty-three prospective soldiers of the U. S. Army Signal Corps donated blood for men already in the armed forces at the Red Cross Blood Donor Center, Twenty-third and C Street Northwest, yesterday.

This was the second group donation made by enlisted reservists who will become radio men in the Signal Corps upon completion of courses at the National Defense Training Center.

About 15 women students from the machine shop at the center also donated blood to the Red Cross yesterday.

Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

When War Will End

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 12.—The British people are more optimistic than the American people in their guess as to when the war will end.

Nearly half of all Britishers polled by the British Institute of Public Opinion think the enemy will be licked within a year. In the United States only two in every five are that optimistic.

In Britain the layman's attitude was measured in a public survey on the following question:

"How long more do you think the war will last?"

Here is how Britishers vote. Note that 49 per cent, or virtually half, think the fighting will be over in a year, although 8 per cent think it will take more than two years.

|---|---|
| 1½ years | 21 |
| 2 years | 19 |
| 3 years | 5 |
| More than 3 years | 3 |
| Undecided | 3 |

In the most recent test in the United States, in late November, the American Institute found that while a majority think Germany will collapse within a year, only 40 per cent believe Japan can be defeated and the whole war brought to an end within a year.

Another 33 per cent think it will take between one and two years more, while as many as 20 per cent believe peace will not be achieved until anywhere from two to five years or more. The latter figure compares with 8 per cent in Britain.

Evidence that the British people themselves are likewise just as determined to beat their enemy on the other side of the world as they are to lick the Nazis at their front door is shown in the following British poll.

"Churchill says that when Germany is beaten Britain will continue fighting until Japan is defeated. Do you approve or disapprove of this course?"

| Approve | 88% |
| Disapprove | 6 |

Husband Gets Rude Jolt After Seven Happy Years Of Marriage. When Wife Asks Separation Leading To Divorce; How Dissuade Her, for Children's Sake?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We have been married for seven very happy years and now a most serious situation confronts us. We need your counsel. Please help us. We have two children, three years and six months of age, respectively. My wife wishes a separation and eventually a divorce. The only reason offered is that she is very unhappy. No details. Just that she is unhappy with our marriage. It is very difficult to discuss the issue in a logical manner, as there are no specific causes cited for her unhappiness.

At no time in our marriage have I ever been unfaithful. I have too much respect for my family to dishonor them in such a shoddy manner. To the best of my ability, I have tried to be a good husband and father. I love my wife and children very dearly, more than mere words can express; and certainly I do not wish to be separated from them.

Is it not true that divorce works a tremendous hardship on all parties concerned, especially if innocent children are affected? Should not their future be considered before ours? My position requires me to be away from home rather often, as is the case at present. But presumably that is not the reason for our difficulties. There seems to be little information, other than the above, that would explain the unfortunate condition. I have covered the situation to the best of my knowledge. Your assistance will be greatly appreciated.

WILL.

Man Totally Fails To Understand Wife

DEAR WILL: The fact that you understand your wife so little as to be completely in the dark regarding the basic reason for her desire to be divorced suggests that, fundamentally, you are strangers to each other,—that, as Walt Whitman wrote, "the eyes of your intelligence never meet." And for a certain sensitive, imaginative, intelligent, introspective type of woman, the prospect of growing old in a perfunctory intimacy with a man whose mind and spirit were alien to hers might seem insupportable,—especially if a conviction of their essential inability to "speak each other's language" dawned on her early in marriage, while she was still young, ardent and desperately hungry for genuinely soul-satisfying masculine companionship, and still believed she had time and a fighting chance to claim that boon, if only she were free to try again.

It may be that your wife has spent most of these past seven years keeping up an appearance of contentment while trying in vain to find the combination, within the framework of marriage, that would make the relationship permanently tolerable or worthwhile, from her viewpoint.

The fact that now, with startling decisiveness and "out of the blue," (so far as you are concerned), she asks for separation leading to divorce,—when the second child is the merest infant,—suggests that she may have realized at last, with calm finality, that it's just no use trying to "make a go" of the impossible (from her angle); and that all her efforts to make a better situation are simply making matters worse, for her.

Must Know Her Thought To Change Her Mind

Of course, there is a bare possibility that she is in love with another man, too, by now;—a state of affairs which conceivably could have developed as a result of your routine absences from home, combined with your lack of understanding of her. Under such conditions, she would tend to be doubly susceptible to the interested attentions of some congenial "other man," who happened her way. You may wonder what these speculations have to do with your request for advice, relative to saving the marriage. My feeling is that you cannot change your wife's mind about divorce unless and until you know what's wrong with the marriage, from her viewpoint; and whether, from your viewpoint and hers, it could be corrected to her satisfaction.

Granted that divorce, in cases involving unfit parents, does work tremendous hardship on innocent children, still, it's no particular benefit to children to be reared in a home where parents live in stoic estrangement.

It Will Help if She Gets Grievance Off Chest

So my advice to you is to tell your wife that if she wants a divorce, she must first tell you frankly and in detail,—to the best of her ability to be soul-searchingly honest,—just what she finds wrong with the marriage relationship, and with you. Tell her you want to know where you failed; or what the set-up has lacked, from the woman's view.

However, if she stubbornly refuses to say more than that she is "just unhappy,"—then you might say, "Well, if you won't talk to me, will you talk to a psychiatrist? For your sake, I don't want you to go off at a tangent. But if you can bring me authoritative assurance that divorce from me is what you must have to make you happy, I will take the steps necessary to see that you get one. That's fair enough, isn't it?"

THAT WILD ARNOLD GIRL

By Irene Ernhart

The story thus far: Jenny Arnold is regarded by many people, and particularly by her father, as an uncontrollable, spoiled brat. She runs around with a gay and frivolous, but wholly innocent crowd of young people who have maintained their clique through high school and after graduation. Her brassy modernism is largely due, she knows—as does Bud Nelson—to her fear of ever revealing a true sentiment or emotion. The only time she ever breaks down is after she and Bud, out dancing with their crowd, see Jenny's mother, Celia, in the company of the debonair young dancing master, Tony Terranio. When Jenny gets home her father upbraids her for keeping such late hours and it is with difficulty that she keeps from telling him about Celia. She is awakened next morning by the housekeeper, Mrs. Crick, who says there is trouble downstairs.

Chapter II

"Trouble, Crick?" Jenny said yawning.

"Yes. There's some people here about redecoratin' the living room and library, and nobody said a word to me about any such doings," Mrs. Crick scolded.

Jenny sat up, blinking, stretching, and tried to think. Redecorating? Oh yes, she did remember. Madeline arguing with Mother over having something done. It was on account of that new man Madeline had met at the Ames,' a snob from out East, Harvard and all that. Disgustingly rich too, and Madeline wanted to impress him. One of these playboys the papers always follow so avidly.

"It's all right, Crick, old girl," she said slowly, "turn 'em loose. It's one of Madeline's brainstorms. I'll have naught to do with it, even if they paint all the banisters pink!"

Crick shrugged. "No tellin' what the house will look like if Madeline has to dicker with them decorators," she threatened. "I reckon it'll look like the inside of the Crazy House at the Fair, but don't blame me."

"Oh well," Jenny relented after a moment, "I'll take just two minutes to look at their stuff."

There were four people downstairs. One was a sleek smart woman, wearing her black hair middle-parted and drawn back tight and straight. She had dark bulging critical eyes and a sulky over-painted mouth. She was glaring at father's old maroon drapes in the library, pencil poised determinedly over her notebook.

Meanwhile a fat man in shirt sleeves gazed in silent disapproval at father's carved mantel. And another of the lot, a thin gray wisp of a man matched samples by the window.

The other man, apparently quite indifferent, probably the boss of the outfit, merely gazed out of the French doors toward the garden. Jenny's glance rested briefly on a pair of extraordinarily broad shoulders and the back of a dark finely-set head.

"Nothing's to be changed in here, except possibly the drapes and chair covers," she said loudly into the stillness.

Dr. Henderson Explains New School Services

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor

So you're wrestling with your conscience Hamlet fashion—shall you take a war job or stay home to care for the school-age children? You don't know what will happen to John or Sue when school is over for the day. Still, the country needs you to help win the war.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

If that is your problem, take heart—the extended school services now being worked out by the Government in conjunction with the local school boards and community is attempting a solution, according to Dr. Ruth Henderson, senior specialist in the Office of Education, guest speaker at the Monday afternoon tea of the Washington Branch, American Association of University Women.

Explaining the "National Program for the Education of Working Mothers," the comely speaker, who hails from Virginia, pointed out that five types of services are needed. These are counseling or information to mothers, pertaining to jobs and whether or not she should work or stay home; foster or day care of children; homemakers; day nurseries and extended school services.

Here's how the extended school services will work. Say Johnnie arrives before the opening hour. A teacher will be on hand to see that he is taken care of—whether it be supervised study, breakfast that you didn't have time to prepare or a few minutes rest. At the end of the school day, a new shift of teachers will be there—not to supervise study but a recreational program. Outdoor games will be emphasized so as to give the children fresh air and exercise. Then there will be beds for those who need sleep or rest. Those who like can develop a hobby—science, crafts, dancing—in fact, a whole range of interesting things to do.

Before coming to Washington in October, Dr. Henderson was State supervisor of elementary education in Virginia. Mrs. Clyde M. Hadley, president of the local A. A. U. W., presided at the meeting, which was in charge of the club's education committee.

Democratic Club Luncheon

For a few hours Monday, the busy gals of the press shoved aside their typewriters and quipped orally for the members of the Women's National Democratic Club. Occassion was the club's luncheon honoring outstanding feminine scribes. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, was the ranking guest, but the women of the press were the guests of honor.

Hostess of the day was Mrs. Richard L. Stokes, who was assisted by Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mrs. Norman Ross and Mrs. S. S. Hanks. Mrs. James Le Cron, was program chairman. Once Mrs. Curtis Shears, club president, had welcomed the press, she turned the introductions over to witty Genevieve Forbes Herrick, who presided as a master of ceremonies.

Mrs. Sturdevant Reelected

Mrs. Edward W. Sturdevant was reelected commissioner of the District of Columbia Council of Girl Scouts at the monthly meeting yesterday at Scout headquarters.

Elected to serve with Mrs. Sturdevant were Mrs. W. M. Kiplinger, Mrs. F. W. Milliken and Mrs. Maury Middleton, deputy commissioners; Mrs. Edgar J. Goodrich, recording secretary; Mrs. Proctor L. Dougherty, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harry C. Kramer, treasurer, and Mrs. Jesse Miller, assistant treasurer.

Mrs. Sturdevant

Mrs. Sturdevant, in a statement issued yesterday, declared the big job ahead of the local organization this year is the expansion program which is being launched by the national organization under the slogan, "A Million or More by '44."

Two new chairmen, Mrs. William Mackall, membership, and Mrs. C. P. Conrad, training, were named by Mrs. Sturdevant. Other committee chairmen who were reappointed by Mrs. Sturdevant for the coming year are Mrs. O'Neal Johnson, program; Mrs. W. M. Kiplinger, public relations; Mrs. P. C. Alexander, Camp May Flather; Mrs. Frank A. Heilman, day camp; Mrs. H. Cochran Fisher, overnight camping; Mrs. Samuel Boggs, organization, and Mrs. Jesse Miller, finance.

Mrs. Koenigsberger Speaks Tonight

Mrs. Lawrence Koenigsberger, who has just been reelected second vice president of Women's Supreme Council of B'nai B'rith and who is chairman of war service activities for District No. 5, B'nai B'rith Auxliaries, will speak to the members of Victory Auxiliary tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the Jewish Community Center.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

How any mother ever takes care of twins baffles the parent who is overcome by the responsibilities of one child. She sees that every minute in her day seems to be consumed with duties and she cannot imagine how a mother manages who has two darlings of the same tender age.

While I have had no personal experiences with twins—all of my flock having come singly—I have been cullin, the experiences of parents of twins for many years. Also, it has been a conviction of mine that one does not need two schedules for twins, but just the same schedule put into action one-half hour apart.

Thus, one would begin the day by waking one twin at 6 o'clock, the next one at 6:30 and proceed through the day, ending with bedtimes at 6 and 6:30. Then at no one time would both children be screaming for attention which it might be impossible to give simultaneously.

The ceremony of bathing and feeding need not consume more than 30 minutes. If one child is noticeably slower than the other in taking his bottle, let this be the last to be fed, so that if the time slips past the 30-minute period the other twin will be asleep and oblivious of it.

It is literally impossible for any mother, however devoted, to spend as much time fondling and handling twins as she might one child. This should be no detriment to the babies if they get loving attention when bathed and fed and changed and thus develop a sense of the affectionate protectiveness of their mother. Most babies could do with much less handling than they get.

With such a schedule and a determination to give them only the opportunity to grow and thrive without undue demands being made upon them, twins need not be twice as difficult as a single baby to rear in health and happiness.

Our leaflet, "The First Six Weeks," also contains information relative to the tiny or premature infant. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope ot Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Washington Post.

War Work Interests British Newcomer

Mrs. John G. Lockhart Enters Nurse's Aide Corps

By Peggy Preston

Two years of service in London's famous "Sick Bay" has not dimmed Mrs. John G. Lockhart's enthusiasm for amateur nursing.

In Washington less than two months, this Scottish-born wife of Major Lockhart, First Secretary of the British Embassy, is already well along in her training class for membership in the nurse's aide corps of the Red Cross.

"Before the war I had a healthy dislike for hospitals," she said yesterday at her pleasant new apartment on Woodley Place. "But I soon got over that. Besides, it actually scares you when you realize the wrong things you can do, and have been doing right along, for sicknesses in your own home."

Tall and slender, with gay blue eyes and fresh rosy skin, Mrs. Lockhart is loathe to dwell on her experiences in wartime London. She is, instead, eager to be on with the events and happenings of the moment here in Washington.

Helped Nurse London Civilians

As a member of Britain's V. A. D., Mrs. Lockhart helped in nursing London's civilian population. There were the war workers, air wardens, etc., whose families had been evacuated and who, in time of sickness, needed ordinary home care. For these people, the "Sick Bay" was instituted, serving as a type of home hospital for civilians only.

"We became quite used to being bombed," she smiled. "One learned to sleep in cat naps and we were all too busy to really give much thought to it."

MRS. JOHN G. LOCKHART

Delighted and charmed with the city, she has a long list of things on her itinerary. Her afternoons of work completed at Red Cross headquarters, she is apt to be off on a sightseeing tour. The Capitol, the National Art Gallery, the Folger Library, The Pan American Union, all these buildings and many more are due a call from her.

The day after landing in New York, her enthusiasm for American scenes carried her on a tour of the city, ending with a climb to the top of the Empire State Building.

"But I'm a confirmed Washingtonian," she claimed. "New York cannot approach this city's beauty and charm."

Our rationing system, the current dispair of American housewives, is bothering her not at all. With the aid of a handy new cookbook, she is thoroughly enjoying the opportunity to prepare complete meals again.

"It was not so easy in London," she explains. "On one occasion, I had invited friends down from London to spend a quiet night in a cottage we had taken in the suburbs. The morning they were to arrive, I went to the village to shop, and found the entire market block had been wiped out by a bombing during the night. There was nothing left to do but telephone my friends and ask them to bring along their own food."

Did Similar Work In London During The 'Blitz'

Both Are Natives Of Scotland

Both Major and Mrs. Lockhart are natives of Lanarkshire, Scotland. Between his terms of service with the army, Major Lockhart was engaged in the publishing business. He returned to active duty in 1939 and for a time was with the Military Intelligence. Last August he was assigned to his present post, but it was not until November that Mrs. Lockhart was able to join him here.

Her eagerness to help all she can in America's war effort is due in part to her admiration of the part played by the Red Cross during London's darkest hours.

"I think no one here realizes how much those baskets of food and clothing meant to the people of Britain," she said. "Each person who received aid wanted to write a letter of thanks, but in many cases events intervened, and so, perhaps, you in America do not know how much we as individuals appreciate your generosity."

Former Nancy Lawrence, Husband on Wedding Trip

Ceremony Saturday Evening Held at Home of Bride's Parents; Reception Follows

With the bridegroom scheduled to report soon for duty with the United States Marine Corps, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Hart, jr., are now concluding a brief wedding trip and will be in Parris Island, S. C., by the end of this week.

Mrs. Hart is the former Nancy Eleanor Lawrence, and she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Lawrence of this city. The Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of the First Congregational Church, officiated at the ceremony which took place last Saturday evening in the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. Hart is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lawrence Hart of Patchogue, Long Island.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in cream taffeta, styled with a hoop skirt, accented with inserts of ruching. Rosepoint lace, worn by her sister, Mrs. Herbert Carl Sturhahn at her own wedding, trimmed the square neckline, and a tulle veil fell from the bride's Queen Anne cap of lace. A bouquet of stephanotis and lilacs further set off the attractive costume.

Mrs. Sturhahn, her sister's only attendant, wore off-green velvet, with a white floral and green tulle headpiece. Field Adams of Long Island, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man. Following the ceremony there was a small reception for members of the family and a few friends.

The bride is a graduate of the Ethel Walker School and Harcum Junior College. Mr. Hart was graduated from the Hotchkiss School and attended Princeton University.

Betty Fleishell Married in Yale Chapel

The first wedding of an aviation cadet at Yale University was that of Berwin Abbey Cole, U. S. A., and Miss Betty Agnes Fleishell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Vincent Fleishell of Sligo Park Hills, Md., who were married in Dwight Memorial Chapel. The Rev. Sidney Lovette, head chaplain of the university, officiated.

The ceremony took place on Friday, January 8 and the bridal couple are now making their home at the Duncan Hotel in New Haven, until Cadet Cole graduates from his final training course February 15. Mrs. Cole will then return to Silver Spring.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, had as her matron of honor and only attendant, Mrs. Maurice Felix of New Orleans. Aviation Cadet Franklyn Foss of New York served as best man.

New York's New Woman in Congress Has Cleared First Hurdle; Already a Favorite With Women of the Press

Don't know when I've met anybody more attractive than New York's new Representative-at-Large Winifred C. Stanley. Far as I can make out, she has everything—looks, brains, chic and a flattering way of looking right at you taking in every word of wisdom that may fall from your lips, that wins you over at a moment's notice.

I met her first at an informal supper party on Sunday night; saw her again last night at the Women's National Press Club dinner, and I must say she's a charmer if there ever was one. I like the way she expresses her opinions without weighing them too carefully or worrying too much about how they'll sound, or whether she'll be quoted. No wonder she's already a favorite with women of the press.

"I got into this thing quite unexpectedly, you know. Until 10 minutes before I was nominated, I hadn't any idea about it," she said. Her first day in Congress wasn't quite as she expected it to be. "I wasn't thrilled. Not one bit. Everything was confusing, with House members coming and going, changing seats, walking up and down the aisles and greeting each other right while the session was going on. You see, I'm used to being in court, and business there goes on without any side play. Not that I'm criticizing the way Congress is run—I certainly don't mean to do that—but to a newcomer, it is confusing."

She supposes her experience in the House will be interesting and exciting ("Everybody says it will," she said with a smile), but as yet she has been too busy getting her office organized and her work under way to know much about that. She has been somewhat amused by broad hints circulating to the effect that she and Clare Boothe Luce are rivals for the limelight and are sure to dislike each other heartily, in the manner of "The Women." "I admire Mrs. Luce very much," she said by way of closing the subject.

She and Mrs. Luce exchanged smiles and compliments quite lavishly last night. And both, along with the other "legislative ladies" feted at the dinner, made brief, witty and off-the-record speeches. Some day I may get permission to get a few quotes into print. But not now.

Friends are wagering that even after Wiley B. Rutledge's appointment to the Supreme Court is confirmed, he won't follow the example set by Justice Hugo Black, Justice Robert H. Jackson Justice William O. Douglas in the matter of ascending to an unlisted telephone for his residence. Ever since Rutledge's nomination went to Capitol Hill, Mrs. Rutledge and other members of his family have been patiently answering all telephone calls, and there is no indication, as yet, that there will be any change of order later.

All of us remember the furor that swirled around Black's appointment, and nobody blamed him for taking umbrage behind an unlisted telephone number for quite a while. He's back in the directory now, and so is Jackson. Frankfurter never was "in." Murphy and Reed also have unlisted numbers, but everybody knows you can reach the first by calling the Mayflower and the other by calling the Washington Hotel. Douglas still is unlisted; has been since the moment his appointment was confirmed. But the Chief Justice is still among those present in the directory, and so is Justice Owen J. Roberts. Former Chief Justice Hughes always was, and still is. Half the time, even when he occupied top place on the country's highest bench, he answered his home telephone himself. That's democracy for you. Nobody likes for a public official to have a private telephone number.

Mrs. Rutledge, incidentally, plans to continue her wartime work along the same lines she has been pursuing. Not long ago she completed a first-aid course at the Red Cross, and then followed that up with a nutrition course. Sunday mornings she is on duty at a canteen, and any spare time she has is devoted to work at a local nursery school.

The two daughters and the son of the Rutledge household are all at home now. Mary Lou, 20, who attended Iowa University before the holidays, is now planning to take a business course here. Jean Ann, 17, is a senior at Wilson High School and Neal, 15, is a sophomore at Sidwell Friends School.

Picked Up In Passing: One of the Mayflower's swankiest suites will be occupied by the Vice President-elect of Uruguay, Dr. Alberto Guani, who will arrive in Washington Saturday morning, January 23, as guest of the United States Government. Original plans called for Dr. Guani to stay at historic Blair House, official home for high ranking visitors, but arrangements were speedily changed when it was discovered much-needed repairs in the house could not be postponed. The Mayflower was selected as Dr. Guani's "Washington home" because the Uruguayan Ambassador and Senora de Blanco live there; and it's there they will entertain at a large reception in honor of their countryman on January 26.

Overheard at a recent Mayflower cocktail hour: A pert little redhead asked her Major if he liked to rhumba. His response, "I love it like a WAAC loves to salute!"

Mrs. Edward E. ("Dolly") Gann is one who doesn't mind the ban on pleasure driving one little bit. "I just take the bus wherever I want to go," she said. "I don't mind. I've been riding it for months. Besides, if anything we can do that easy will get our boys back home, and the war over, one minute sooner, I'll ride the bus for the duration."

Looks as if the OPA restriction on driving is going to have quite a noticeable effect on Washington parties. Not that they will stop—oh, my dear, no, not in this party-loving town. But chances are, you won't be seeing many long evening dresses for quite a while. As one Cabinet wife put it yesterday, "They just don't look well on a bus or street car." How right she was.

Nancy Gordon To Be Wed to Ensign Cox

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Rola Gordon announce the engagement of their daughter, Nancy, to Ensign Richard Martin Cox, U. S. N. R., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Cox.

Miss Gordon, who was born at Rosario, San Juancito, Honduras, had her early schooling in Honduras before attending the Edgewood School in Greenwich, Conn. She was graduated from George Washington University, where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma fraternity. A granddaughter of the late Dr. Henry S. Colding of Savannah, Ga., and Mrs. Colding, who now lives in New York, and a niece of Mrs. Frederick Livesey of Washington, she has lived in the Capital with her parents since 1933.

Ensign Cox was graduated from George Washington University and the George Washington University Law School. A grandson of the late Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Cox of Fremont, N. C., he is a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

The wedding will take place in the near future.

Mrs. Dabney to Give Tea for Daughter

Mrs. Charles Thompson Dabney will entertain at tea on Friday in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Stephen Roszel, jr., who was before her marriage Miss Page Nelson Dabney.

The marriage of Miss Dabney and Cadet Roszel took place on Christmas Day at St. George's Episcopal Church in Arlington, Va. The Rev. Stanley E. Ashton officiated.

The bride was graduated from Gunston Hall in June. Mr. Roszel is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Samuel Roszel of the Crag, Markham, Va. He attended Virginia Polytechnic Institute and the University of Virginia. He is now in the Army Air Corps.

Dolores Dahl To Be Married On Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. George Dahl announce the engagement of their daughter, Dolores Ruth, to William Gordon Surber, jr. of Clifton Forge, Va.

The wedding will take place on Saturday at 8 o'clock in the Church of St. Stephen and Incarnation with the Rev. Paul Wilbur officiating.

Miss Dahl was graduated last February from the Calvin Coolidge High School. She is studying at the Remington Webster Vocal Studio and is also employed at the David W. Taylor Model Basin, Bureau of Ships at Carderock, Md., where Mr. Surber is a junior naval architect.

Mr. Surber was graduated from Randolph Macon Academy and from the Columbia Technical Institute. He is a member of the Theodore Roosevelt Masonic Lodge. His father is the late William Gordon Surber of Clifton Forge.

Miss Dahl was guest of honor at a recent shower given by her aunt, Mrs. William Dahl of Silver Spring, Md., and a group of her friends entertained in honor of the bride-elect at dinner and cocktails on Thursday evening.

Pleasure Ban Cancels Reception

Mrs. Roosevelt has canceled the reception she had planned to give at the White House on January 20, owing to the ban on pleasure driving.

The fete was to have been given for the council of the Women's Committee for the National Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Hans Kindler and the soloists in the Ninth Symphony following the Beethoven Festival Concert.

Party Canceled

The Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. LeGallais announce that in order to cooperate with the Government policy of promoting the war effort, have decided not to hold their customary reception in honor of the birthday anniversary of Her Royal Highness, the Grand Duchess, on January 23.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

THE HORSE AND WAGON AGE is here! Jean Richards, alert owner of the Stables on Riverside Drive, refusing to be stumped by the gas holiday, has hired a big wagon and a couple of spanking bays for the duration as a pick-up service for her guests. The wagon will make calls at downtown hotels every hour on the hour beginning at 6 p. m. Ports of call will be the Raleigh, Willard, Washington, Hay-Adams, Carlton and Mayflower Hotels. And then it's off to the Stables with its wonderful cookery and snappy dance music . . . If this keeps up we'll be expecting to see parties of horseback riders canter up to the night spots. And pony carts and buggies parked in front of danceries. And, say, those old "low-neck hacks" must be reposing in storage somewhere. It's time to bring 'em out . . . But, as a matter of fact, the gas stringency hasn't bothered the niteries too much. Almost without exception they're convenient to bus and streetcar service, including suburban Crossroads.

Helen Standish, New York's newest singing "find," recently starred at La Martinique, will return tonight to Paul Young's where she sang for many weeks last season.

IN SUPERNATURAL CIRCLES. Leo, the astrologer of Mayfair, was a member of Hobson's crew that bottled up Admiral Cervera's fleet in the Spanish-American War . . . Roberta Robbins, psychic of Restaurant "400," made a Hollywood short on her mystic art for Pete Smith a season or so ago . . . Lynne Hayes, former palmist-artist for the Cafe Caprice, is back from New York, was dancing in Caprice the other night . . . Zoee, the sweetly clever lady who now peers into your future at Caprice, is the mother of a remarkably talented young daughter whose soprano voice is being trained for the concert stage.

OF FIGURE KEEPING. Those wonderful curves on The Victory Room's Ina Ray Hutton that produce as many admiring gasps as her music, are the result of consistent athletics. La Hutton favors horseback riding, swimming and tennis, is mighty expert at all three.

Lounge Riviera patrons can now have a solid eight hours of dance music and general fun without stirring from Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street. Roy Comfort's group plays from 5:30 to 9, when the Pete Macias band arrives to play until 1:30. You can get dinner in the adjoining hotel dining room.

TOPS IN POPULARITY with Mayflower Hotel execs is Durelle Alexander, singer in the Mayflower Lounge. She recently gave 'em all little jars of smoked turkey paste, a pet delicacy of her native Texas. (When Chef Marchitelli hears about this, he's going to ask Durelle to get him a few hundred pounds for canapes.)

A MODEL GODFATHER is Louis, owner of the Copocabana. He recently gave a huge birthday party for his 2-year-old goddaughter, Marie Ruiz, daughter of Maestro Frank Ruiz of Restaurant "400." Tiny Marie sat at the head of the table, ate quantities of arroz con pollo, wisely paid no attention to the red and white wine.

One of The Post's most faraway readers is Burt Lopatin, owner of Burt's Trans-Lux, but now in the Coast Guard. His Sunday Post is sent to him in Ketchikan, Alaska.

GARDEN OF GIRLS. Lyda Allen, whose lovely contralto is now heard with Bill Strickland's band at the Lotus, sang in the Rainbow Room a couple of seasons ago. She left Rainbow to get married, said she was going to be "just a housewife." But the singing urge reasserted itself a few months ago. . . . Eve Knight of the King Cole Room is a part-time but enthusiastic housewife. She's simply wild about her new Virginia home. . . . Lynne Turner, singer at the Old New Orleans, is wearing a set of quaint and beautiful hand-painted jewelry. . . . El Patio's Kathleen Quinn is no end stunning in a peplum blouse of white brocade with black velvet ribbons in her hair and a slim black skirt. . . . Earline King, the soprano charmer of the Dubonnet Room, is married to Joe King, the ventriloquist.

President Favors Relief Drives

President Roosevelt approved yesterday a plan for two major money-raising campaigns for relief activities this year, one in the spring by the American Red Cross and the other in October for "a national war fund."

The latter will replace the various individual campaigns for the United Service Organizations, Community Chest and Council, those of certain State war chest organizations and the drive of major foreign relief agencies.

The formula for the two campaigns was presented in a report of the War Relief Control Board, of which Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia and to Belgium, is chairman.

Davies said that Winthrop Aldrich of New York had agreed to assemble a group of organizing trustees for the national war fund. He said they would be "the focal point from which the 48 States, the 600 Community Chest cities and the many unorganized counties are to be approached in the formation of a central and national voluntary and civic organization.

President Roosevelt issued this statement:

"I am glad to approve of the report of the War Relief Control Board. I note with special satisfaction the provision for the wide participation in planning and operation of this enterprise which makes it far more than just another campaign.

"It will contribute greatly to our unity, enthusiasm and power in the war effort when it joins our concern for our own men and women in the service our support of our fighting Allies and the nations enchained, and our determination to hold the line on the home front.

"This clears away any national drive which might compete with the most important Red Cross campaign in March."

Downey Heads Civil Service Committee

Senator Sheridan Downey (Democrat) of California was named chairman of the Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday by the Democratic Steering Committee.

The majority membership of the District Committee was left unchanged by the steering group, and Senator Pat McCarran of Nevada will continue at its head.

Downey succeeds former Senator Bulow of South Dakota as leader of the Civil Service Committee. Bulow did not return to the Senate this session, having been defeated for renomination in party primaries.

James G. Scrugham, new Senator from Nevada, was picked to fill the one Democratic vacancy on the committee. Downey already had been serving, ranking behind Senators George of Georgia and Byrd of Virginia, both of whom head other committees.

With Republican members already appointed, the two committees will line up like this during the Seventy-eighth Congress:

District Committee: Democrats—McCarran, chairman; Glass of Virginia, Tydings of Maryland, Bankhead of Alabama, Reynolds of North Carolina, Bilbo of Mississippi, Overton of Louisiana, Clark of Idaho and O'Daniel of Texas. Republicans—Capper of Kansas, Bridges of New Hampshire, Holman of Oregon, Burton of Ohio, Buck of Delaware and Bushfield of South Dakota.

Civil Service Committee: Democrats—Downey, chairman; McKellar of Tennessee, George, Byrd, Mead of New York and Scrugham. Republicans—Langer of North Dakota, Burton, Aiken of Vermont and Brooks of Illinois.

D. C. Budget Finds Favor In Congress

Although few members of Congress have had a chance to study the District's 1944 budget requests carefully, advance indications yesterday were that most of the cuts which will reduce the local budget almost a million dollars below the current fiscal year appropriation will meet with favor in Congress.

The consensus also was that the Budget Bureau's slashing of the number of extra police which the city may add to its force—the Commissioners wanted 200 but were limited to 100—also will be accepted without argument.

The suggestion also was thrown out by Representatives who declined to be quoted that Congress might take even more slices out of the $55,334,664 recommended by the Budget Bureau, working out new economies of their own.

It was pointed out that the OPA's dictum against pleasure driving, plus all-round traffic reduction, may cancel the present need for a larger police force here.

This opinion was tentatively advanced by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, who has always been an advocate of more police protection for Washington.

"The shifting picture," the West Virginian declared, "accentuated by the present curtailment in auto traffic, is no doubt one reason why a lessor number of rookies than that requested by the Commissioners seemed practical.

"This will certainly be a subject meriting the most careful study by the appropriations subcommittee. It is of course essential that the congested population of the wartime Capital have an adequate and efficient police personnel."

Hankin Scores Move to Cloak Dissenting Opinion

The Public Utilities Commission's denial of the use of its mimeographing facilities to minority member Gregory Hankin to circularize a dissenting opinion was termed by him yesterday "a scheme to keep the public uninformed on matters of direct concern to them."

Asserting that he knew nothing of the action of his two colleagues until he read of it yesterday morning's newspapers, Hankin said that it came as an "amusing surprise" to him.

The dissenting opinion in question was one he wrote to a PUC approval of the Washington Gas Light Co.'s petition to transfer $34,624.26 legal expenses for the recent rate hearings from a suspense account to operating expenses.

Scoring Chairman James H. Flanagan's statement that the dissenting opinion should go only to persons interested in the petition—in this case the gas company—Hankin said: "This is a matter of public concern. The accounting of the company is subject to public regulation, and this is a sufficient reason why the public is concerned."

Lyman, Belgian Fund Manager, Dies at 66

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Edward Branch Lyman, 66, publicity director, who was manager of the Belgium Relief Fund which raised two million dollars for the relief of Belgium in the first World War, died today.

He served as a wire editor in the New York office of the Associated Press in 1907, as Canadian manager of the Associated Press from 1908 to 1910 and as New England manager from 1911 to 1916.

State Groups Plan Rally On Defense

The conference of State societies of Washington, D. C. was born for the duration of the war last night when 15 State society representatives met with Col. Lemuel Q. Bolles, metropolitan civilian defense director, at the Community Center building, to plan an all-States civilian defense rally on February 9.

Dr. Emory J. Woodall, 5336 Twenty-ninth Street Northwest, a trial examiner for the Federal Power Commission, was elected president.

Other officers are: William J. Fleming, president of the New Jersey State Society, vice president and treasurer, and Miss Lorna E. Lockwood of the Arizona State Society, secretary.

Colonel Bolles opened the meeting by making a plea to all representatives present to contact Washington residents from their home States to join one of the 66 local civilian defense subdivisions setup in the District.

A special request was made for all newcomers to join a branch of civilian defense in their own community.

Colonel Bolles said that although many persons now in Washington are not permanent residents, the defense of this city is still vitally important to all.

Woodall appointed the following persons on committees for the all-States rally:

On the program committee: Howland A. Sarra, president of the Florida State Society, chairman; Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, secretary of the California State Society; Robert H. Lucas, president of the Kentucky State Society; Mrs. James W. Thurston, secretary of the Georgia State Society, and Shelton W. Fairchild, president of the Delaware State Society.

The committee is to be assisted by Marjorie A. Day of the employee relations division of the office of the Secretary of War, and Charles H. Cunningham, executive secretary of the Home Hospitality Committee.

On the subcommittee in charge of the rally are: Miss Pherne Miller of the Oregon State Society, and Arthur C. Pearson, vice president of the Minnesota State Society.

On the budget committee are: William J. Fleming, president of the New Jersey State Society; Winthrop L. Carter, jr., of the New Hampshire State Society, and S. J. Hess of the Ohio State Society.

Boy, 11, Hangs Self After Reprimand

Augustus Clyde McGinnis, jr., 11, was found hanging from a pipe in the basement of his home, 3213 Patterson Street Northwest, by a playmate yesterday.

Police said the boy apparently had committed suicide because of reprimands for throwing snowballs at passing automobiles yesterday morning.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Clyde McGinnis. Mrs. McGinnis has been in ill health and in a hospital for two years.

Richard Norair, 13, 5908 Thirty-second Street Northwest, told police he had gone over to the McGinnis home about 4:15 p. m. to see whether Clyde wanted to go out and play. No one answered his knocks and he entered the house, finally searching as far as the basement. There he found his playmate, hanging by a ¾-inch rope from water pipes. An overturned chair lay nearby.

Richard ran home and told his mother of his discovery and Mrs. Norair immediately called police and Emergency Hospital. Dr. Herrick Thomas of Emergency Hospital pronounced the boy dead at 4:46 p. m.

Clyde's father, who is a pharmacist at the University Drug Co., 3746 Tenth Street Northeast, was summoned. He told Sergt. Richard J. Felber of the homicide squad that his son had called shortly before noon to tell him the principal at the Lafayette School had sent him home for throwing snowballs at passing automobiles.

McGinnis advised his son to return to school, but said the boy had not consented to do so when the conversation ended. He said the rope had been in the boy's room.

Besides the father and mother, a sister, Mary Anne McGinnis, 19, who works for the War Department, survives.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night issued a certificate of suicide.

16 Accepted As Citizens, 73 Rejected

Sixteen persons became United States citizens and 73 applicants were rejected at a special session of the Naturalization Court held by Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday.

The session was held to offer a last chance to the 89 applicants, all of whom failed to qualify in previous hearings, when they lacked educational and similar requirements. Since their applications, under the law, would lapse unless final action was taken by tonight, Justice Letts called them before him yesterday.

The administering of the oath of allegiance to the 16 successful applicants was made the occasion for especial ceremonies.

Those admitted to citizenship were: Mrs. Theodora N. Boukaras, 61, 9 Ninth Street Northeast; Guiseppe Fazziani, 72, 33 N Street Northwest; Mrs. Santa Cruzi, 47, 924 Fifth Street Northeast; Leprino Calogero, 44, 1647 Gales Street Northeast; Vito Nocela di Germino, 56, 923 Irving Street Northwest.

Also Dinos George Ratro, 48, 1300 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest; Mrs. Maria Benedetti, 58, 1022 Sixth Street Northeast; Jacob Tebeleff, 50, 3122 M Street Northwest; Morris Pivinick, 57, 927 G Place Northwest; Mrs. Anna Cleonice Martorelli, 51, 923 Fourth Street Northeast; Mrs. Rosa Casamento, 47, 2222 O Street Northwest.

Also John Abramides, 47, Clifton Forge, Va.; Mrs. Josephine Du Guay Kerr, 37, 4831 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest; Sidney Baker, 41, Port Belvoir, Va.; Joseph Anthony Amato, 46, 915 New York Avenue, and Joseph Schwartzman, 46, 917 M Street Northeast.

OPA Places Temporary Ceiling on Corn

Increasing its grip on the cost of living, the Office of Price Administration yesterday placed a temporary price ceiling on corn at Monday's market levels.

The move was designed to enable livestock raisers to maintain a profit margin between livestock and food prices, permitting maximum possible production of meats, milk, poultry and eggs for war.

Corn-production goals were raised recently to provide enough feed for our expanding hog production.

Effective Today

The ceiling which becomes effective today was generally received with favor by farm State Senators, although many interpreted the action as placing a floor as well as a ceiling on the grain.

Actually, corn prices will continue to be supported at 85 per cent of parity. Taking into consideration triple-A payments to farmers, present prices reflect slightly in excess of 100 per cent of parity, Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes, Agriculture Secretary Claude R. Wickard, and Deputy OPA Administrator J. K. Galbraith said in a joint statement.

Without considering triple-A payments, present corn payments would represent a return of about 93 per cent of parity, Agriculture officials said.

Agriculture had asked that the ceilings be placed at a higher level, but OPA with Byrnes' support had insisted that present levels be the maximum allowed, it was learned.

The temporary price ceiling will be replaced within 60 days by a permanent regulation maintaining prices at existing levels, OPA said.

On the strength of the announcement, corn futures slumped on the Chicago Board of Trade. Other grains also declined.

Only seed corn, popcorn, grain sorghums, sweet corn, broom corn and local farmer-to-farmer sales of corn were continued exempt from price control.

The regulation will benefit consumers by enabling greater supplies of livestocks to be provided without enormous increases in price resulting from uncontrolled feed.

William Beverley, Only 25, Becomes Lieutenant Colonel

At the age of 25, William Welby Beverley, who became one of the Army's youngest majors six months ago, is now wearing the silver leaves of a lieutenant colonel, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. C. Beverley, 406 North View Terrace, Alexandria, Va., learned yesterday.

BEVERLEY

Alexandria-born and a graduate of George Washington High School, Beverley is the father of a year-old son, William Welby Beverley, jr. His wife, the former Miss Margaret Rust, is the daughter of R. N. Rust of Alexandria.

Beverley is commanding officer of the field artillery of his division stationed at Fort Benning, Ga. He graduated from the U. S. Military Academy, near the top of his class, in 1938.

MULLIGAN, JAMES R. In loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, who passed away one year ago today, January 13, 1942.
Not lost to those that love thee,
Not dead, just gone before.
You still live in our memory
And will forevermore.
His wife and daughter, Dorothy Mae.

MULLIGAN, JAMES R. In loving remembrance of our dear brother and son who passed away one year ago today, January 13, 1942.
Deep in our hearts is a picture
Of the loved one laid to rest;
In memory's frame we shall keep it,
Because he was one of the best.
His mother and sister, Stella.

NEED $10 TO $300 BY TOMORROW? Call Mr. Waller at GLade 1111 (Rosslyn) or Mr. Murphy at HObart 0013, who arrange single signature loans by phone. Employees Small Loan Corp., 3309 Rhode Island ave., Mount Rainier.

DON'T GET A LOAN
UNTIL YOU COMPARE COSTS
HOUSEHOLD'S RATE 2% PER MONTH ON ALL LOANS
Here are two good rules. 1. Don't borrow unless you must. 2. If you do borrow, get your loan at the lowest rate you can. Household's rate is 2% per month on the unpaid balances. Total cost of $50 loan, repaid in six monthly installments, only $3.58. Many other plans. No endorsers required. No credit inquiries of friends. If a loan is the answer to your problem, phone or visit us.

Society Passes Bible Goal In 3 Months

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

The Washington City Bible Society's scheduled one-year drive for $1500 to buy 10,000 Testaments for servicemen has soared over the top in only three months, Dr. W. L. Darby, society president, announced yesterday.

The campaign, in which the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association cooperated by donating funds for 2000 Testaments, began last October 1, following a luncheon in which officials of the American Bible Society and local Bible leaders took part. Dr. Page Etchison, religious work secretary of the Central "Y," is Bible Association president.

Reaching of the goal does not mean any letdown in the society's efforts to get Testaments to the servicemen, according to Dr. Darby. On the contrary, an effort may be made to secure funds for an additional 10,000 Testaments before October 1, he said.

The largest single contribution came from the National Hospital Service Society, which supplied $150 for 1000 Testaments that will be shipped to England soon. Gilbert Stover is president, and W. H. M. Stover, secretary-treasurer, of the Hospital Service Society.

The executive committee of the Washington City Bible Society is expected to meet today to elect new officers for the ensuing year.

Physical Fitness Conference Opens Here on Friday

Leading muscle enthusiasts will attend the George Washington University Conference on Physical Fitness here Friday evening and Saturday. District schools and the District Recreation Department will cooperate.

The Friday session will open at 8 p. m. in the Hall of Government on the campus. Physical fitness programs in the armed services will be discussed by Lieut. Col. Theodore Bank, Commander J. J. Tunney, U. S. N. R., First Officer Dorothea Coleman of the WAACS, and others. Harry S. Wender, president, Federation of Citizens Associations, will discuss manpower demands among civilians.

The Saturday sessions will start at 9:30 a. m. at Roosevelt High School. After addresses by United States Office of Education representatives, group discussions will be held. Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, will address a luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m. at the school. Physical fitness demonstrations by men and women will begin at 2 p. m.

WLB Sets Up Shipyard Labor Commission

A shipbuilding commission was established by the War Labor Board yesterday to handle labor disputes and pass on wage questions in the shipbuilding industry employing about 900,000 workers.

The commission will consist of seven members—a chairman, two members representing management and two representing labor, appointed by the board, one member appointed by the Secretary of the Navy, and one appointed by the Maritime Commission.

On wage matters, the commission was directed to follow policies laid down by the WLB.

32 Shows Set For Workers And Soldiers

Thirty-two shows have been booked for servicemen, warworkers, and hospital patients during the next four weeks, the District of Columbia Recreation Department announced yesterday.

Special shows will be sent to the officers' dance at Fort Meade on January 15; to an enlisted men's dance at Fort Meade on January 16; and to 101st Infantry Theater on January 17.

On Sundays at 4 p. m. a classical music program will be given at Service Club No. 1, 306 Ninth Street Northwest; Tuesdays at 7 p. m. a variety show and films at Gallinger Hospital; and on Saturdays at 10 p. m. a floor show at the Salvation Army USO Club, 606 E Street Northwest.

On January 21, and 26, auditions will be held at Thomson Community Center, Twelfth and L Streets Northwest, for Government employes.

WPB Salvage Division Formed

Donald M. Nelson, War Production Board chairman, announced on Monday the formation of a salvage division, headed by Paul C. Cabot as director.

Creation of the division follows the resignation of Lessing J. Rosenwald as director of the conservation division, of which salvage formerly was a branch. Mr. Cabot was deputy director of the conservation division in charge of all salvage operations. The new division will be in the resources agencies group under the director general for operations.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Perch Crew Safe in Prison

Cincinnati, Jan. 12 (AP).—A cautiously advanced and unverified report that officers and crew of the lost United States submarine Perch are "well" in a Japanese prison camp, came today to parents-in-law of Lieut. Comdr. David Albert Hurst, the ship's commander.

(The Navy Department announced in April that the Perch was long overdue and "must be presumed lost.")

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Wickham, whose daughter, Connie, married Lieut. Comdr. Hurst, said she had informed them from Annapolis, Md., that Navy friends in Honolulu recently picked up a Japanese radio broadcast purportedly by a Lieutenant Vandergrift, fifth officer of the Perch, in which he was quoted as saying:

"We were rescued and made prisoners March 3. Good health. Unwounded. Well. Write to Zentsuiji prison camp."

On a later broadcast, she related, a man introduced as Lieutenant Ryder, fourth officer of the American submarine, asserted that officers and crew were safe and asked that Mrs. Hurt be notified.

Four relatives of Lieutenant Ryder who heard the broadcast were said to have recognized his voice.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Lament in Post Identifies Jumbo, The Great Dane

The Great Dane in the Pound that inspired the brigadier general's wife to the poem of lament was identified yesterday. The name is Jumbo and she got in the Pound through war nerves.

Early yesterday, Fred Weissmiller, 2520 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, engine driver for No. 8 Fire Company, phoned The Post to say, "I certainly want to thank that lady." She is Mrs. Frank J. McSherry, 3232 Garfield Street Northwest, wife of Brigadier General McSherry. She saw the sad-eyed Dane and wrote the poem. Weissmiller yesterday read the poem, saw the picture, said that's Jumbo.

The Dane had been grumpy. Her owner, Carl Weissmiller of Capitol Heights, Md., brother of Fred, went into the service last July. Jumbo, forlorn, was brought to Washington by Fred. A week ago, a friend of his took the dog for a walk. She broke away, ending up in the Pound. Search for her was unavailing until the poem and picture appeared in the paper.

Enough Cots Now Available To Servicemen

In contrast with the situation of a few months ago, when even Mrs. Roosevelt remarked on the shortage, not only are all servicemen here on furlough provided sleeping accommodations, but there have been many cots to spare in recent weeks, the servicemen's lodging committee of the War Hospitality Committee reported yesterday.

It was found unnecessary last Saturday night to utilize any of the available cots for white soldiers in the areas immediately outside the District. All those in the District were filled by the men and no one, it was said was sent away.

Of the 260 cots ready last Saturday for use by Negro servicemen in Washington and outlying sections, 123 were occupied. Four of these were in Alexandria, while the remainder were in the District.

Churches, schools and buildings contained 1559 cots maintained by fraternal organizations. They were set up last Saturday for use by white soldiers. Eleven hundred and two of these were occupied.

However, officials said they did not intend to slow up on their efforts to obtain more cots, the quota for which was set a while back at around 3000. It seems, they said, that troop movements today, and curtailment of furloughs, have been responsible for the decrease in the number of servicemen here.

Even greater was the discrepancy between the cot supply and demand for the week of January 2. The report of the lodging committee revealed that 2027 were available in the various buildings, of which only 1143 were occupied.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborne

The most unbelievable play in contract bridge is the "smother" play, whereby the left-hand defender, holding what appears to be a certain trump trick, is robbed of it as declarer forces the defender to waste a trump by underruffing.

For those who are familiar with the trump-coup situation, wherein the right-hand adversary's trumps are picked up, the smother play is the trump coup in reverse, but further complicated by the fact that it is the partner of the defender holding the seemingly sure trump trick who actually "smothers" it by his lead of a suit which allows declarer the well - known "ruff and discard."

The opportunity for a smother play does not occur often and, as is not surprising, when the opportunity does present itself there are few bridge players skillful enough to make use of it.

Here is the final situation of a smother play:

|---|---|---|
| | ♠ None♡ A◇ 8 7♣ None | |
| ♠ None♡ K 7◇ 9♣ None | NORTHWEST EAST | ♠ 7♡ None◇ Q♣ 7 |
| | SOUTH♠ None♡ 10 9◇ 5♣ None | |

Hearts are trumps, and South requiring two tricks, throws East in with the diamond. This exit makes East return a club or a spade so that dummy can discard or overtrump West and capture the apparently safely guarded king of hearts with the singleton ace. George S. Coffin of Fitzwilliam, N. H., authority on squeezes and coups, once said: "This ending is an optional illusion. It looks like and, in effect, brings about the result ordinarily obtainable only by a deliberate revoke. Yet the play is legitimate."

Paul to Discuss Spending Tax Plan

Randolph Paul, general counsel of the Treasury Department, will discuss the proposed spending tax before the Taxation Clinic at National University School of Law, at 6:30 p. m. today. Paul, whose writings on the subject have been widely published, was at one time sterling professor at Yale University and also lectured at Harvard Law School.

Dr. Milton I. Baldinger is director of the clinic.

Rep. Smith Renews Fight For Labor Act Revision

Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia, renewed in the House Monday his campaign to revise the National Labor Relations Act, which failed in the Seventy-seventh Congress.

Smith introduced a bill similar to that which was passed by the House last year only to die in the Senate, and which provided a 30-day "cooling off" period before workers in war plants could go on strike. It also outlawed the closed shop.

Bar Group to Hear Gen. Wickersham

Military government will be discussed by Brig. Gen. Cornelius W. Wickersham, U. S. Army, commandant of the School of Military Government, at a joint meeting of the committees on Military and Naval Law of the American Bar Association and Federal Bar Association, in the Mayflower Hotel today at 8 p. m.

Col. William Cattron Rigby, chairman of the joint committees, will preside, and Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, provost marshal general and former judge advocate general, will introduce the speaker. Another former judge advocate general who has been Governor of Puerto Rico, Maj. Gen. Blanton Winship, will lead a general discussion on military government.

Keep Censorship At a Minimum, Willkie Urges

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie, cautioning against too much censorship during the war, advised book publishers today to "say what you think no matter what some Government official thinks is best for the people."

"Open the books, let 'em read 'em, keep censorship to the minimum," he asserted at a book and author luncheon.

Mrs. Irita Van Doren, editor of the book section of the New York Herald-Tribune and one of the co-chairmen of the luncheon, announced that Willkie had agreed to publish a book on his recent trip around the world. It will be entitled "One War, One Peace, One World."

Recreation Board Asks D. C. Commissioners To Appeal to WPB to Relax Playground Ban

A request from the District Recreation Board asking the Commissioners to appeal to WPB for authorization to complete an improvement program involving 29 playgrounds, halted several weeks ago by WPB order, was forwarded last night after a meeting of the recreation board.

Commissioner Guy Mason has already given his assurance that the Commissioners will study the matter as soon as possible in order to expedite action, Recreation Superintendent Milo Christiansen said yesterday. The recreation board's request was forwarded without delay in order that proceedings toward getting the projects, both under the Federal Works Agency, under way again immediately.

With the support of the Commissioners, "we should be able to convince the WPB facilities review committee that these projects do not interfere with the war effort," Christiansen said.

Long Background

Several months' background work by the department, which included getting the approval of the Federal Works Agency, the Federal Security Agency, the Secretary of War and Secretary of Navy, would be lost if the projects are abandoned, he pointed out. Many citizen organizations and recreational agency officials had also indorsed the projects.

Construction of 20 of the playgrounds, which would have cost $478,000, had not begun, he said, but work on nine of the areas costing $235,000 had "seemed to be going ahead well," and some contractors were ahead of schedule when the halt order came through, he said. Work had been pushed in hope that the playgrounds might be ready for spring use.

These projects seemed justified in connection with the war effort for two reasons, Christiansen stated, first, to replace facilities withdrawn for war construction, parking and defense installations, and second, to provide space for an augmented program in view of the city's rapidly expanding population.

No critical materials are involved in the work, which consists largely of grading and surfacing the areas, Christiansen told the board. The manpower and machinery involved, he said, were not working when the projects were contracted for and there would be "time enough to order a stop if it is shown that they are now needed elsewhere," he said.

War Workers Center

In sending the request to the Commissioners, the Recreation Board agreed to send representatives or help in any other ways when the Commissioners study the projects.

Further plans for a war workers' center, 1517-19 R Street, are being held up, because inspection of the building showed that considerable remodeling would be needed in order for half the building to pass safety regulations, Christiansen said.

Fire escapes would be needed "all around" the building, and these are hard to get now, he pointed out. An alternative site, the address of which he did not mention, will be inspected by recreation officials today.

The "master project" for a number of such War Club Centers, having been passed by the Commissioners last week, is now in the hands of the Federal Works Agency.

Negro War Recreation activities previously under the War Hospitality Committee are being merged with the Recreation Department and will be administered hereafter through Recreation Service, Inc., Christansen reported to the board.

Educator Named To Field Post With Zionists

Saul S. Spiro, educator, formerly director of Zionist activities in the Midwestern area, has been named director of the national field service of the Zionist Organization of America and head of its speakers' bureau, Simon Shetzer, executive director of the organization, announced yesterday.

A native of Palestine, Spiro has been president of the tri-State Zionist region and of the Pittsburgh Zionist district. For six years he was head of the Hebrew Teachers Training School and educational director of the Jewish Religious Schools in the southwestern district of Pennsylvania.

Educated in Palestine and the United States, he was at one-time literary editor of the American Jewish Outlook and has lectured and written extensively.

Home Leasing And Conversion Go to HOLC

The Home Owners Loan Corporation will take complete charge of the national public conversion plan for leasing homes and subdividing them into apartments for warworkers, James F. King, assistant to the administrator of the National Housing Agency, told The Post yesterday.

Completion of plans for the switch will be made at a meeting in New York today. Attending will be Philip Klutznick, assistant NHA administrator; Lyman Moore, assistant NHA administrator; John H. Fahey, Federal Home Loan Bank Commissioner, and Charles F. Cotter, general manager of the HOLC.

Reason for the shift from direct NHA handling is the lack of response from owners of the right sort of houses. Some 5000 applications for conversion have been received throughout the Nation, but only a small percentage of these have been found adaptable to conversion. Under the HOLC's setup the program will be liberalized to make use of real estate operators and their files.

King emphasized the fact that the NHA still will be the over-all supervising agency for conversion, but HOLC will handle all the details from applications to letting of contracts and supervision of work.

The NHA, he said, will still handle the other two phases of its program, Homes Use Service, where residents of defense areas are urged to take warworkers in their homes and finding rooms, houses and apartments for warworkers and the private conversion program, where conversion through private funds is stimulated.

The public conversion program, however, will be handled completely by the HOLC—mostly because houses adaptable for conversion haven't come in. The HOLC, incidentally, will take a complete new tack. The mountain—in the form of convertible houses—didn't come to Mahomet, so Mahomet—now the HOLC—will go to the mountain.

Mississippi Jury Indicts 5 Men In Lynching

The Department of Justice announced last night that a Jackson, Miss., Federal grand jury has indicted five persons on charges of violating the civil rights of a Negro in a lynching at Laurel, Miss., on October 16, 1942.

Those named in the two indictments are Nathaniel Shotts, Allen Pryor, Barney Jones, William Oscar Johnson, and Luther Holder, deputy sheriff and county jailer of Jones county, Miss.

According to the Justice Department, the Negro, Howard Wash, was convicted on October 16 of the murder of Clint Welburn, a resident of the community, and was awaiting sentence. During that night, the indictments said, a mob of which four defendants were members persuaded Holder to turn over the keys to the Laurel jail, took Wash from his cell and lynched him.
